POETICAL.

[Written for the Herald.]

Dear Mother, glowing thoughts of thee This cherished relic gives to me; But ah! without the artist's power.

No sorrow 'ere can cross thy lireast. Though while on earth in tears we sow,

Then may I hope to gain the por

Chanted by the angelic throng. As to this spot I oft repair

I have a hope steadfast and sure, Christ is my hope I die seeure." And gently then our mother dear Retired to rest, without one fear.

Recline on me, thy weary head i And sweetly whispered in thy ear I am beside thee, do not fear.

With me you shall forever be Forever O! the raptarous thought That I shall hence no more go out; This vast domain at pleasure roam.

Throughout my long, eternal home. This habitation of the Lord.

Painted so graphic in thy word. Of it I some renception formed But did not deem it so adorned,

It entered not into my mind, That all the city would be lined With such magnificence and light, Past finite comprehension bright. "Tis true I read the streets were cold And gates of pearl would wide unfold, To give the guests admittance there The bright rewards of heaven to share. Those hills and vales, such sweet contrast,

This prospect shall forever last.

But am I here, oh! can it be That II the Saviour's face now see;

'Tis even so, transporting thought, And I shall hence no more go out, fan-never forget it as long as I live; it was the last thing I gave Angelica.

WHY I DIDN'T GET ANGELICA.

once fell in love with a most charming Prudence dictateth that it is best not to disclose her name so I will merely designate her by the appellation of Angelica. That was not her real name, but she resembled an angel threat for me, which I conceived to be an excel-lent likeness. Spine Ald not think so. My friend, "The Protem," said it looked like a map of Coney Island, with a clam scow drawn up on the, beach r while another friend, (the Don, Vice Pres. Cabarlo Club,) said he was not decided whether it was intended for a ruined abbrey by moonlight, or a dominut, with a soft shell erab walking or it. Well, that only showed their want of tista, and dis-gusting ignorance of everything relating to art.

I did-love Angelica-deeply, devotedly, dearly -1 loved her as no man ever yet suc-ceeded in loving woman. I venture unblush-ingly to assert that Abelard's love for Eloise dearly -1 lorge her as no man ever yet suc-ceeded in loving woman. Freeture unblush-ingly to assert that Abelard's love for Eloiso was as a sick chicken to a patent self-cooking hydrawic ram, when compared with mine-that Romeo was cool. Leander indifferent, and Faust decidedly unfriendly. Nay, more, that the inmortal Villikons himself never loved his Dina as I loved Angelica. And yet, hear H, ye Gods! she loved not me -no, nary love. Oh! lisien, all ye unsuspecting and trusting youths, who pin your faith upon me! Listen, all ye confiding, but fearfully bamboozlod lov-ers, who trust in thewords of females! I can will cause your bones to corrole, and ground of Taingled\_horrm, and\_detestation to issue from your parche elogibilis!  $\gamma$  is and make the beds with mittens on. I entertain vivid cepted presents from me.\_\_l entertain vivid and melancholy recollections of a certain gol-den locket which I gave her. It cost me --well never mind what it cost --it was a fabn-lous sum, but let it go. Then there is a vision of a magnificent ring that, I gave her, which haunts my waking thoughts continually, for its procurement necessitated an outlay of a runnus mount of fready cash, and you here its producement necessituted an outlay of a ruinous amount of ready cash, and you know book-keepers are not generally burdened with an alarming superfluity of tin. And there was a fan -a perfect gen of a fan-with a beautiful picture on it, representing a blue-haired gentleman talking to a yellow-ochre colored damsel with green arms and speckled hands, and two sky-blue-like horns, cating chick weed. The fan had also a pearl handle, and a border of some stuff like that which they powder babies with. Oh ! I remember that disclose her name so I will merely designate her by the appellation of Angelica. That was not her real name, but she resembled an angel so closely, that the name is singularly appro-priate. She did not have wings that I am aware of, though I never examined her per-sonal arrangements sufficiently to be sure-but thien she had the most gorgeous cerulean " orbs," and the most gargeous cerulean and the biggest of all inconceivable dresses, and the biggest of all inconceivable dresses, fell and allowed a view of the most rarising stock; and if all these virtues don't constitute a marvellous resemblance to a thorough bred angel, why I don't know anything about the Angelica was accomplished too. She could Angelica was accomplished too. She could wonan. There is no rubbing it out; women pitch into n seven octave piano, and make information in than Gottschalk and Thalberg and bliss of life-(mar's life, we mean, of and bliss of life-(mon's life, we mean, of course.) Any means that can be devised for preserving them should be publicly made known. They, are different from any other. kind of fruit. You cannot pickle them. You cannot do them up in sugar and set them in a cold room, with a paper soaked in brandy over their nouths. You cannot put them up in cans and seal them up air tight, without injuring their form and flavor. Now, as men are so dependent upon women for life's choicest blessings, a proper mode of preserving them becomes of great moment, and we are sure the public will thank us for an infallible receipt. Haye, the feet well protected, then pay the next aitention to the chest. The chest is the repository of the vital organs. There abide the heart and lungs. It is from the impress-ious male upon these organs through the skin that the shiver comes. It is natures quake — the alarm bell—at the onset of danger. A woman never shivers from the effect. of cold upon her, limbs, or hands, or head, but let the hold strike through her clothing on her chest, and off go her teeth into a chatter, and the-whole organism is in a commotion. One sud-den and severe impression of cold upon the whet shi is the so if dougands. There more noise on it than Gottschalk and Thaberg put together. Her "Sailor Boy" was immense, and her "Etude de Concert" was absolutely crushing. Then she sang oh, Lord!. you. ought to have heard her sing! My knowledge of musical matters is limited; but, if I under-stand my friend, "The Protem" correctly, her schind my friend, "The Protein" correctly, her voice was a mezzo contralto, and ranged from . 'E sharp,' in alt, to 'P accidental,' in major. (I may not have got the technical terms ex actly correct; but doubtless near enough for you to understand it.) She could paint in water colors also. She once painted a pic-ture for me, which I conceived to be an excel-ption the start of the start that we Mr.

den and severe impression of cold upon the chest has slain its tens of thousands. There-comes during these operations, go directly and-put on something more about the chest. Again, do not live in dark rooms. Light fades the carpet, but it feeds the flower. No living an inal or vegetable can enjoy health in darkness. Light is almost as necessary as air and a brown tan is far preferable, even as a matter of beauty, to a sickly paleness of com-plexion matter of beauty, to a sickly paleness of com-plexion This much in regard to the physical means for preservation. There are moral means no less important. Every woman should be mar-ried to an excellent man Murriage, it is true brings care and wear, but it is the ring that is worn that keeps bright, and the watch that lies still and unwound that gets out of order. The sweet sympathies evolved in relation to the family, the new energies developed by new responsibilities, the new new remembration for ell responsibilities, the new compensation for all outlays of strength, brings about a delightful play of the heart and intellect which, in their reaction upon the body, produces an effect that is nothing less than preservation. ow I learned that my love was not returned. I went around to her house one night, and there beheld a young man pay-ing attention to her, sitting by her side on the sofa, and seemingly on very good terms with her. At my entrance they appeared a little confused, and the deepest, deadliest jealousy arose in my heart. I looked at that young man with a look that would have shivered a glass buttle at forty rods. It did not seem to ll teil yo glass bottle at forty rods. It did not seem to
