At the east end of the town, on a high bluff stands the ruins of Scarborough castle, celebrated as the prison of George Fox the originator of the Society of Friends. This castle is said to have been attacked by Oliver Cromwell du ring the civil wars, his cannon being placed on a hill called Oliver's mount, on the opposite side of the town. The place is upon the whole very pleasand but the company is not to be compared with that you meet at one of our American summer resorts. There is a sprinkling of the nobility to be sure but their faces are too sacred to be shown at the public tables of the hotels. Last week was the time for the Doncaster races. The race of the season is the St Leger which was run on Wednesday. Doncaster is about eighteen miles from this place and I went in a carriage with several ladies and gentlemen. We started about nine o clock by the morning, the turnpike was filed with ve hicles of every description from the private carriage with its splendid horses down to the little cart with its donkey which at other times is used for hauling chips around the town for sale. We arrived on Doncaster race course about twelve o'clock. The course is perfectly level and about two and five eighths miles in circumference. Booths of every description were crected all slong one side of the course and gambling, betting, and eating and drinking, especially the latter, seemed to be the order of the day. -After several minor races were decided, the contestants for the St Leger stakes were brought up to the starting place. They num bered upwards of twenty of the best horses in England. Ex-Gov. Bigler's Views on Slavery.

Ere this reaches the public eye, the election for Governor of the State of Pennsylvania will have been decided ; but many of the questions which have been discussed during this campaign cannot cease to be agitated with the occasion which brought them forth. Among these quest ons that of slavery may be considered as the most important. It is this which has stirred up dissension among the people; it is this which has drenched the land in blood ; it is this which threatens the destruction of the best government that the sun ever shone upon. Whatever political sophists may say, it is evident to every unbiased mind that slavery is the primary cause of all the evils which are now upon us. Had the Constitution of the United States provided that no State with slavery should be admitted into the Union, we believe that to day, the whole country from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, would not have been tarnished by the presence of a single slave. Each State, seeing the advantages to be gained by be-coming annexed to the Union, and receiving the censure of every enlightened nation because of protection of slavery, would in a reasonable time have relinquished the insti-tution, and have accepted, the Constitution of the United States. And-now, where we have war and political darkness, peace and hermines would be a state of the state of happiness would have reigned supreme .--We say this in no spirit of reproach toward the framers of the Constitution, but merely to show that slavery is the root of all our evils. Having premised thus much, we proceed to a more direct discussion of the question as announced in the caption. Mr. BIGLER, in his speech delivered in the Court House, on Thursday the 8th inst., dwelt at considerable length on the subject of slavery, and endeavored to show that it would be almost a crime to free the negroes which are held to servitude in the South. This opinion he deduced from the following considerations: Negros are an inferior race, and are there-Negros are an inferior race, and are there-fore intended for a state of servitude; they are incapable of taking care of themselves; they are in slave y educated and christian ized, and if treed they will degenerate into raised. These, we think, were his strongest on the question of inferiority, we give the following extract from Hayen's Moral following extract from Hayen's Moral
