The outside work of the Oapital extension is n ogressing slowly, but the large area now covered by the wings, compared with the increased height and size of the dome, destroys the unity of design so conspicuous in the original building, and gives to the entire structure, a rather squal appearance. On the second of this month, the "Statue of Freedom," the crowning glory of the dome, was elevated to its position amid the thunders of artillery, and the noclamations of thousands who had assembled to witness it. This statue was modelled in plaster by the late eminent sculptor, Crawford, and cast at the Foundry of Cark Mills, near Bladensburg. It is made Reformation has been guilty of great cruel | of bronze, is nearly twenty feet high, and weighs fifteen thousand pounds ; its cost to the Government was about thirty thousand dollars. Though collossal in its proportions, its elevation to a beight of nearly three hun-drel feet from the ground at the east front of the Capital, reduces it to about life size .--The dome itself is double, and between the interior and exterior shells, a winding staircase leads to the very summit. Within a few days, the two doors intended for the hall of the House of the Representatord, on the Holsten river, and at last ac- tives have been placed in position. They are of massive bronze, elaborately ornamented with figures and heraldic emblems in high relief, and cost thirty five thousand dellars .-An inscription on the casing informs us that they were modelled at Rome, by Randolph Rodgers, in 1856, and east at Munich, Bava-ria, by Ev. Miller, in 1860. On the frame are four figures representing Europe, Asia, Africa and America, the arch above the doors containing a spirited representation of the landing of Calumbus In each door there are four supkey panels each containing an important aceno in the life of the great Navigator ; while the spaces between are filled with statutes of Ferdinand, Isabella, Cortez, Ponce da Leon, and others so intimately connected with the discovery and settlement of the country. This great work of art is really a study; the details being worked out with a completeness in design and finish which oballenges the admiration of every one. A CUTE TRICK .--- A dandy was recently walking under the araciles of the Rue de Rivoli, in Paris, holding in his hand a gold headed cane of splendid workmanship. A man*supported by two crutches came up, and asked for alms in a pitiful tone. The dandy, moved to pity, gave the beggar a small silver coin. At the same moment a person near him suddenly exclaimed, "How can you, sir, allow this rogue to deceive you? Please to lend me your eane and I will show you that this rascul runs better than I can." The dandy, without reflecting. lent his cane ; the beggar, the moment he preceived it in his de tractor's hands, threw away his crutches and took to his heels, and was followed by the man with the cane, whilst the spectators and the dandy particularly, remained in convulsions of laughter at the sight, and exclaiming, altornately, "Oh, he will be caught !" " No, he will not be caught !" But both the racing heroes disappeared at the next turning in the sireet, and their victim remained waiting for on one half of our fair land, in their insane his splondid cane, which cost five hundred francs.

THE REWARDS OF LABOR .-- There never was such a demand for labor, and labor was never better paid than in this country at the present time. And this will continue if the working classes use their opportunity with moderation and judgement. If they are too exorbitant in their demands, the result will sooner or later be a paralysis in many branches of business. Every mechanic and laboring man whose services are now better paid than ever before ought to feel a new impulse to faithfulness. With some the higher the pay the more lazy and independent they become, and this is particularly the case among the more ignorant classes .--But the great bulk of the intelligent working men we believe are disposed not only to improve their own condition, but to do justice to their employers. While they improve this millenium of labor they will do what they can to prolong its existence.
