GRANT AT CHATTANOOGA.

Poetical.

BY JAMES B. EVERHART. There went up a wall of sorrow From all the loyal land-There went up a shout of triumph From every rubel band-For the banks of Chickamauga Beheld our smitten host, And the banks of Chickamauge Made good the rebel boast.

And trade through all our cities Was staggered by the blow, And down, with its torn banner, fell The nation's credit low. In the market and the warehouse The pulpit and the press, In the parlor and the highways, Was seen the sore distress

Good men beyond the ocean The poor of every soil. And the negro, like a culprit Chained to his daily toll, Felt, each, the dire disaster-Fearod, each, a darker hour-Feared, a l, this cursed prestige Of fell barbaric power Now many a brave heart trembled Many a weak one sighed : Many a prayer was offered up To turn the battle's tide; Will cur God forsake His children And turn away His face? Will the cause of truth go under, And crime usurp its place. Will the fields of so much glory, Will all the martyrs slain,

Will our history and altars And all our hopes be vain Oh! for a sign in heaven, Such as the Kalser saw-Ohl for some gifted here, Lis conquering sword to draw!

Eo some doubted and debated, And marveled and deplored-With unswerving faith some waite The justice of the Lord. Soon, brighter than the morning fire His stately stops are seen-Charlots, blazing with His ire, Amongst the clouds carean !

Now ! GRANT girds on his armor, And leads his legions forth-For in the fray that comes to-day Jehovah's with the North I And he bids his trusty captains, That at the signal peak, Their ranks shall scale, through iron hall, The mountain sides with steel The columns, swiftly formed in line Move gaily o'er the field, As if they know the baughty for Is sure to fly or yield. And, Rebels, new look to your works

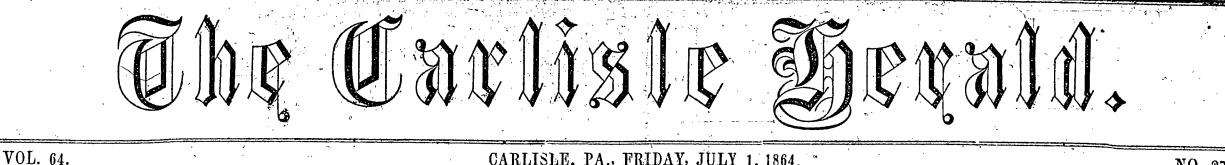

See that your aim be true, For Grant common is those loval bands. And this is no review Full force the mighty struggle swells Death roars from every gun, While through a flood of human blood

The rifle-pits are won. Our forces follow up the step, Loud shouting as they go. Not heed the shot that, thick and het, Come crashing fast below

And when they gain the crested ridge The clouds beneath them lie, And down after it seems a war ons in the sky Round them rolls the sulphrous smoke That follows ball and bomb While thunders boom, as if the doom Of all the earth had come

They reach the very last redoubt, Holl yawns at every fire; Midst sword and lead, o'er piles of dead The rebei hordes retire And routed, scatterel, and dismayed, Far fies these lords of slaves While flashing bright, from every height, The flag of freedom waves

All honor, then, to all our men. To leaders and to guard, Who bared their life in mortal strifs, Or who kept wat hand ward: And praises to the Lord of Hosts Whom n tions must obey, That He did bide, all by our side. On Chattanooga's day ! Let holy tears bedew the gray Of those who fall in fight;

CARLISLE, PA., FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1864.

RHEEM & WEAKLEY, Editors & Proprietors.

Peter Alexiowitz, Czar of Russia had | tentiary to the states general. Arriving | he excelled in the marine arts. An exalready rendered himself redoubtable by at Amsterdam, he wrote his name in the cellent captain of a vessel, an able Pilot, the battle he had gained over the Turks | list of the carpenters of the admiralty of | a good Sailor, an adroit carpenter, he was in 1697, and by the capture of Azof, the Indies, and worked in the dock-yard much more estimable in these arts bewhich opened to him the Empire of the just as the other carpenters did. During | cause he was born with an extreme fear Black Sea; but it was by more wonder- the intervals of his labor, he learned those of water. When young, he could not ful actions than victories, that he sought | branches of mathematics which would be | pass over a bridge without trembling; he for the name of Great. useful for a prince-fortifications, naviga- | had to have his carriage windows closed.

Muscovy or Russia, embraces the north- tion and the art of forming plans. He Courage and genius conquered, in him, ern part of Asia and of Europe, and from | entered the shops of the workmen, examthis mechanical defect. the frontiers of China it extends over a ined all their manufactures and allowed He built a beautiful port near Azope space of fifteen hundred leagues, to the nothing to escape his observation. From at the mouth of the Tana's; he wished confines of Poland and Sweden. But thence he went to England, where he to keep galleys there; and in the course this immense country was hardly known | perfected himself in the science of conof time, believing that these long flat and in Europe before the time of the Czar structing vessels, be returned to Holland light vessels would do well in the Baltic Peter. The Muscovities, were less civilized and saw every thing which he could turn Sea, he built more than three hundred o than the Mexicans when they were dist to the advantage of his country. At last them in his favorite city of Petersburg. covered by Cortez ; born all of them slaves after two years of travels and voyages, he The finances of the Czar were in fact of masters as barbarous as themselves, repaired to Russia, taking with him the of little account in proportion to the im they remained in ignorance of all the arts of Europe. Artisansof all kinds folmensity of his states. He never had arts, and in that insensibilitly which smoth- lowed him there in a crowd. Then could twenty-four millions of revenue, counting ers all industry. An ancient law, sacred be seen for the first time, large Russian the "Marc" as about filly livres, as we do among them, forbade them leaving their vessels on the Black Sea, in the Baltic, to-day, but may not do to morrow. The own country without the permission of and on the Ocean. Buildings of regular richest man there is the one who does the. their patriarch. This law, made to de and puble architecture were erected in greatest actions. Tis not the searcity of prive them of opportunities of knowing [ the midst of Muscovite huts. He estab money, but that of men and minds, that their bondage, was pleasing to a nation lished colleges, acadamies, printing houses renders an Empire weak. which, in the depth of its ignorance and | and libraries ; the cities were policed, the The Russian mation is not numerous misery, disdained all commerce with for- garments and costnines were changed although its women äre truitful and its eign nations. gradually, although with difficulty, and men robust. Peter himself in policing The era of the Muscovites began with the Muscovites learned by degrees what his states had unfortunately contributed the creation of the world; they count 1207 society was Their superstitions even, to their depopulation. Frequent reyears to the beginning of the last cen- were abolished ; the dignity of the patricruitings for wars, a long time unfortutury, without assigning any reason for arch was extinct; the Czar declared himnate, nations transplanted from the shores this date. The first day of their year self the head of their religion; and this of the Caspian Sea to these of the Baltic comes on the thirteenth of our month of last undertaking, which would have cost consumed in their labors, destroyed by September. They allege as a reason for a less absolute ruler, his throne and head, maladies, three fourths of the children this, that it was probable God created the succeeded almost without opposition, and dying in Muscovy, of the small-pox, more world in Autumn, in the season when the assured him the success of all his other dangerous in this climate than in any fruits of the earth are in their maturity other, and the last the calamitous issues new measures. Thus the only appearances of knowledge of a nation so long a time savage and After, having abased an ignorant and which they had, were gross errors. No barbarous clergy, he dared endeavor to barbarous even in its civilization, are the one among them doubted that the Auinstruct it, and by this even, he risked causes why this large part of the contitumn of Muscovy could be the spring of | making it formidable. But he believed nent has yet such vast deserts. There another country in an opposite climate ---were in Russia, in the year 1727 five hunhimself too powerful to fear this. He had They were even ignorant of use of figures; made them teach philosophy and theology dred thousand families of gentlemen, ten they used small balls, threaded on an iron in the few cluisters which remained, but hundred thousand lawyers, a little more wire; there was no other method of countit is true that this theology had a tinge of than five millions of citizens and peasthe savage times in which Peter had left ants, paying aspecies of tax, six hundred ing, in all their receiving offices, and in the treasury of the Czar. Their religion his country. A man, worthy of belief, thousand in the provinces conquered unwas, and is still, that of the Christian assured me that he had assisted at a pubder the Swedes the Cossacks of Ukraine, Greeks, but it is intermingled with suthe Tartars, vessels of Muscovy did not lie discussion, where the question was perstitions, to which they were as much amount to more than two millions. In whether smoking tobacco was a sin. The more strongly attached as they were exfine there were not in this immense counrespondent in the argument, held that it travagant, and as their yoke constraining. try more than fourfeen millions of men, was permitted to get intoxicated on bran Few of the Muscovities dared to eat a that is to say, a little less than two-thirds dy, but not to smoke, because the most pigeon, because the Holy Spirit was pic (Hely Scripture says that which cometh the population of France. The Czar Peter, in changing the mantured in the form of a dove. They ob- | from the mouth of a man defileth him, served regularly four Lents in the year, but  $t_{i}$  which entereth therein defileth and in the times of abstinence they could | him not." at nourish themselves with either eggs of The monks were not setled. milk. God and Saint Nichlas were the reform. Scarcely had the Czarestablishobjects of their worship, and immediate- | ed printing houses, before they used them ly after them, the Czarand the patriarch to deery him. They asserted that he was The authority of the latter was as boundthe Antichrist ; their proofs were that he tiation between Asia and Europe ; he less as their ignorance; he pronounced removed the beards from loving men, and sentences of death, and inflicted the most | that dissections of the dead ware made in cruel punishments, without baving any his academy. But without wished appeal from his tribunal. He rode on to make his fortune, refuted this book, horseback twice a year, followed by all his and showed that Peter was not the Anticlergy in ceremony; and the people pros-Northern Ocean. christ, because the number 666 was not trated themselves in the streets, as the in his name. The author of the lib I was Turks do before their Grand Lama. Conwas broken on the wheel, and the author fession was practised, but only in the case of the refutation was made Bishop of

NO. 27.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS. [From Our Daily Fare.] BY HORACE GREELY. I D 9op! our way through darkness lead But thine is living light ; Teach us to feel that Day succeeds

To each slow-wearing Night: Make us to know, though Pain and Wo Reset our mortal lives, 'That I'll at last in death Hes low, / And only God survives II Too long th'oppressor's iron heel The sapitly brow has prosend; Too oft the tyrant's murd'rous stee

Has pierced the guiltless breast; Yet in our souls the sead shall lie Till Thou shalt bid it thrive, Of steadfast faith that Wrong shall dia And only Right survive. 111 We walk in shadow; thickest walls

Do man from man divide: Our brothers spurn our tenderest calls. Our holiest aims derida: Yet though fell Craft, with fiendish thought Its subtle web contrives Still Farsehood's textures shrink to naught. And only Truth survives IV.

Wrath clouds our sky; War lifts on bigh His flar of crimson stain t Each in ensuring blith olerspreads the earth In Batt e's gory train: Yot s 11 we trust in Gol the Just, Stul knew our faith alire That, nesth Thine eye, all Hate shall die. And only Love survive THE DOCTORS FORTUNE.

On his door there was 'a fine polished plate, inscribed. MR. JAMES WOODFIELD,

Surgeon When he first came to this small counry town—this is to say, when he first settled there as a professional man-he hal been in the habit of passing in and out of the door often, and of looking with some pride at the brass; for he was young man, only just beginning life, and it was very possible that the shining ate pointed to a future in the distance sciant with as bright a lustre as its own. Somehow, unfortunately, that furule still ontinued to shine in the distance, and the days and weeks and months that began todrag rather heavily over the young rgeon secued to bring it no marer to It was very odd. He had been I on all sides what a promising opning Fore was in Hollowleigh for a surgeon ; he and congratulated himself that the absence M. D. after his name was of no conse-

uence -a mere sound, often unsought think that on t<sup>1</sup> atyoung fellow everything home, unless, to be sure, some of y the greatest men. And, besides, there smiled, insomuch that it was a marvel to country patients sent for you." as already a physician of old standing in ners, laws, militia and face of the counfind him so little spoiled and so full of | "That will do," said Jamos. "You try, wished to make it also famous for fiollowleigh. life and energy. Mr. Woodfield wonder can gr." Bot the most ree which is at the same It is not to be denied that Mr Woodaltait rat in some & Wood Sola large house opposite, is its inmates ever | ueid s heart Grd beat mitha spectre! hope. both the wealth of a nation and the ad-Mr 1 of the the re scarcely had time to settle in his new vantage of the whole world. He underhought of him in his struggles and un I If the doctor was going abroad might use before this Dr. Heath, seeming sudtook to make Russia the center of negofulfilled hopes. Why should they? Ho there not be a chance for him? It seemwas nothing to them. Dr. Heath had a cd only reasonable to suppose there would, still looking at hi dealy to discover that his then residence did not suit him, had actually fixed upon wished to join by canals, of which he perfect right to take the house if he chose. since, if the people were ill, a new docthe large and handsome house exactly drew a plan, the Divina, the Volga and Possibly, indeed, if he had remained at tor must be better than none. opposite to that shining new brass plate. the Tanais, and to open new roads from the other end of the town, it would have The fates were surely in league against It was no use for James to shake his fist the Baltic to the Euxine and Caspian unde but little difference to James .--James Woodfield. No sooner was his ut the doctor's carriage from behind the Seas, and from these two seas to the Everybody would have gone to him just hope conceived than a rude hand dashed window curtains; of no use for him to the same; for why should people consult it to the ground. Dr. Heath would leave wish there had been a school opposite The port of Archangel, closed up by a young, untried surgeon in preference a deputy behind him. an asylum, anything, in fact, but that ce nine months out of the year, and the to a well-known physician, who, moreovcommodious residence with its lawn Mr. Percival Heath was walking down access of which required a long and daner, on certain days, gave consultation the Hollowleigh road toward the town. ing what I say ?" stretching down to the river on the opgerous circuit, did not appear to him to gratis to those who could not afford his He walked slowly, for he had an unusual posito side, which had proved so attracbe sufficiently commodious, and he defees? tive the physician. sense of discomfort, which he could neithsigned from the year 1700 to build on Dr. Heath had done this for managend | er shake off nor analyze. It weighed "I chose this end of the town on purthe Baltic Sea, a port which would be the act of a young surgeon's rash appear- upon him with a very heavy oppression; will. Exert it first to believe that all you pose." muttered James, grinning at the the magazine of the North and the Cane in the town was no reason for the it was like nothing that he could think think you see or feel is, in fact delusion, obnoxious wagons which brought the ital of his Empire. _Ile has built in a Mountinuance of a charity. He began of so much as terror-vague, unreasoning, exert it, above all, to keep as quiet as doctor's furniture. "because he lived wild place the imperial city of Poters-Think it was a mistake to come to-Hol- but strong terror, springing from no cause possible. The will may be overrated and lowleigh; nevertheless, the thing was done, that he could discover, and pointing to well as underrated; but it is the other, and now he has accually followburg, which contains to day sixty thousand houses; where is formed a brilliant ed mo here. "Well, Fsuppose there's and he must make the best of it. no result. He could not make it out. ment of immense power room enough for both; at any rafe, i court, and where delicate pleasures are cannot be worse with me than it has been. It was more than a year, it was nearly He had thought to shake it off in the you are giving way t known. He has built the port of Contwo years, since the polish of that plate open air, but it seemed to get worse in. your eyes on mine. for, except a poverty stricken old woman stradt on the Neva, St. Croix on the had reesed so complayent an expression stead of better, so he turned back toward already. I am going or two, no patient has troubled me." frontiers of Persia admiralties at Astraon James Woodfield's face; and he was can and Azoph, arsenals and hospitals. And then he went to sit at the tables homo. Was he going to be ill? He had "Doctor," said the his little study and be miserble, which still, to use a significant phrase, struggling been blessed hitherto with such vigorous know the dog was mad. He made all his houses small and with to keep his head above water. His health that he knew nothing about illness, thing, and I will have was of no use either. But the fact was, bad taste, but he lavished magnificence He raised the hand which had been you. Swear to kill if ye his eyes, glancing from time to time friends, too, if he had possessed any near and grandeur on his public edifices. through the window, caught sight of the erough to examine his personal appearbound up and on which there appeared a He has compelled the young nobility ance, might have observed that there was corner of some luxariant couch or chain of his country to travel, to instruct themslight soar, to his forchead confusedly, about to use are certain t peeping from under its ovver; of mussive a slight tendency about the corners of his As he did so he reached a point in the cure." selves, and to bring back to Russia, formouth to curve downwards, and altogetheign manners. I have seen young Ruspicture frames and costly mirrors. And road were the river, running parallel er a want of elasticity about he manyery he could not help reverting to certain with it, became suddenly visible by the sians fall of spirit and knowledge. 'Tis thus that one man has changed thorgreat- golden visions of his own, whose brightdifferent from his buoyant air of two lowering of the roadside bank. Mr. Peroival started back with a ping en, "you have bled by set of the start of the ness had faded by this time, and left them years ago. Such friends as he had, howest Empire of the world. It is shocking before him the bale ghost of what they over, were either unobservant or not sufthat this reformer lacked humanity, 'the of desperate misery. He could not bear greatest virtue of mankind. Brutality cace were. Then, that carriage of the ficiently interested in him to trouble them. the sight of that water ; he was afraid of doctor's was the very thing he had in. selves about his looks, and he went on his of it. in his pleasures, ferocity in his manners, master of disciplined troops, he disband- barbarity in his rovenges, blending with dulged himself in picturing as fit forway dreatily, with such hope as he could Behind him came two men with some summon up to help him. He had gone somebody. And as the thought recurred dogs, and he was afraid of them also; n-He polished his states, and was himself him, he sighed bitterly, for the time when so far as to confess that the whole affair fraid of the men, but more so of the dogs; which the man held to b was a decided fuilure. He was at times and more than all he dreaded that gurga savage. He had with his own hands that somebody might be the ruling genibeen the executor of his sentences on us of his house-even this little denmiserably depressed and anxious, almost ling water. He was horribly afraid of it. ready-to give up altogether; but, if he criminals and in a debauch at a table he scemed so far off as to be almost mythi-He stood still and put his hand up adid that, what was to become of him? A gain to his forehead, and his eye caught showed his advoitness in cutting off heads. oal But he did not tell her so. He held a portion of his small capital was gone al-There were rulers in Africa who poured the little soar. A cold perspiration broke certain philosophy, that cheerful letters ready; was he to throw the other after it? over him, and a single ejaculation passed out the blood of their subjects with their own hands, but these monarchs were oun were better than sad and grumblingones; He might try and try, and yet have no his lipssidered as barbarians. The death of a and even, with those obnoxious wagons more chance than that unlucky fly in the "Good God I" "Good God I" ments as was absolutely a It was no irreverent outburst lightly go over once again the day before the window, he, having no pre- window had of eventually escaping the son, whom it was necessary either to punish or to disinherit, would have rendered scriptions to write, and nothing particu. bloated spider on the watch for him. spoken. It was no one, however, could which, by what he concer

TERMS:--$2,00 in Advance, or $2,50 within the year. way to forboding too disual for Marga- akin to envy that he took himself to task ret's eye to read; he could not think of at once for it. "You are developing into a surly brute, any possible good accruing to him from James Woodfield," he said; a selfish the doctor's invasion-as he called itcynic; who would snarl at another's hap piness because your own is-ah, well, If Dr. Heath had stayed where he was, few of the people at this end of the come ?' town might have had recourse to the new After all, though Dr. Heath's removal surgeon ; but now, of course, all the neighhad done him no good, yet it had furnishborhood, as well as his old patients, would ed him considerable occupation, specula run after the great physician, who was tion, and some amusement. As it grev rich and famous, and did not care about darker that night he took his usual positheir patronage. tion, with his elbows on the window sash. "The way of the world," muttered but only harm.

James, after the fashion of disappointed for there was a dinner party at the oppo young philosophers-"the way of the site house, and he saw among the arri world f vals magnates whose patronage would And then he saw Mr. Peroival Heath the doctor's only son, ride up to the door on a horse, wlich drew him, in spite of himself to the window, and made his eyes them. glisten.

But the dostor's reception rooms face "A splendid animal I" solilogu zed the the lawn, so that, after the arrivals wer surgeon, who kept no horse -pretty well, over, and he had counted some dozen o as he thought, bitterly, if he could keep ladies in that gessimer attire which need himselt. "Thit's the sort of thing I to be made fire proof, and as many gen should like now; make perfect, action it may looking mournful in funeral suits, first rate, and a fine 'o sking fell, we ough | there was nothing for him to do but to on him, too I won ler if Mr. Percival watch the flickering lamp outside or turn goes in for the profession. Perhaps he'll to the interior of his little room. He be good enough to take the house next | shows the latter alternative, and as he 'o_nine.' turned he became aware of Master Cadger

And James, returning to his writing calessing the door handle and seemingly materials, put them away hastily. waiting his pleasuro. In general Margaret got her letter a "What do you want, you rascal? Why out once a week, as regular as the coundon't you_" "Knock, sir?" interposed Master Cadtry paper came out, and he got his answer as punctually, but she must wait a ger brickly. "Did, sir, if you please; nother post this time. To day he could couldn't make you hear. It'sonly a parnot write to her, and it was with a cer- 1y, as hus been telling me he's going tain grimness of sarcasm that he thought | away." she would put it down to his being so By a peculiar jerk of his thumb Mas-busily engaged with his patients that he Cudger appeared to intimate that "he" had no time to write. No time! That was Dr. Heath. At least so James unwas the greatest evil. He had too much derstood it. time, and did not know what to do with "Dr. Heath ! Going away !"

"Yes, sir. Leastways he's going to for-He had established a slight acquaineign parts, and can't come back not in a tance with many of the town people, and, day exactly, you know." among others, with Mr. Percival Heath, "Well." said Mr. Woodfield, collecting whom he liked, but with whom he could imself. "what has that to do with me?" or, perhaps, under the circumstances. Nothing, sir.2 It's only as .... party's have much in common, since a struggling alwa a doctoring, and was a solution case man has little sympathy to spare for a she might be took sudden, as her descor favorite of fortune. And he was wont to be had. I told her you wou

He was a strong-will To get home quietly, if p. down this horrible dread, a heel were upon it, and walk men, and that was what he set do. Already the air around him stinct with mad, lurid oycs and sla jaws, and he scarcely know as he was up the street, whether it was thus he that were bearing down heavily upon or his own fancies that made them esc to do so. He got into the house and cal ed his servant. He spoke to the man es calmly as he cculd, and gave him a mes sage. It was fruitless. Dr. Heath's dep uty had gone out; time of return uncerain.

"William," said Mr. Percival, "Da fraid the dog that bit me was made across and fetch Woodfield. Tell fim what I say, and not a word to any one where is it, and when will the good time else. Be quick." 🐃

Mr. James Woodfield was in the little room called by courtesy his study. He had been there pretty nearly all duy, and having spirits, perhaps, to get out By a singular coincidence the subject een studying, and which had rouse siderable interest in his mind, was no. to watch thearrival of the Docto:'s guests. that had been performed in India of case of hydrophobia. He had made himself pretty well master of the detrie and it was cortain psychological feature residu have made the heart of the young surgeon occupied him when, after the gus glad, while in a professional point of view, knock, Master Cudger ushered in Da Dr. Heath cared very little, if at all, for Heath's servant. "Beg pardon, sir. Party would't wait nust see you directly." The rest of Master Cudger F which was irrelevent, was and surgery, while Mr. Perciv- and lay before the doctor in his and M. Woodfield was senvibleto thrill through all his nerves ar no and a single phrase out of the p which he had been reading Lont Lengty ng itselt like an coho in his brain. Without a word he followed the min had seen so many gomanich sobed laned and black coated gentlemen, up the wide semi-circular staircase, which might almost have swallowed up his whole house, and into young Heath's room. Mr. Percival sat on the bed in bis entry sleeves, and he was trembling all over. and shrank back with an expression of terror as the doctor intered. Mr. Woodfield turned and looked full info the servanr's face. "You'll do," he said. "Cong in and sit down there, out of sight, fill I want vou."

Then he turned the key with door and went forward. He have risen with the occasic out of an despondency into a use of iroa nearce and indisputable "Woodfield." ing at him with shot, "yeu see war own makel

al and never

Let marble stones, above their bones Salu's the morning light; Let history write in golden books; Let bards with song enshrine; Let women chant the name of Grant And the glory of the Line

Mliecellaneons.

For the Herald. PETER THE GREAT.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH OF VOLTAIRE BY E. E. H.

Livonia, the most beautiful and fertil of the greatest crimes; then absolutionprovince of the north, had heretofore be seemed to them to be necessary, but not longed to the obevaliers of the Teutonic repentance. They believed themselves order: The Russians, Poles and Swedes pure before God with the benediction of had disputed its possession. Sweden had heir "papas." Thus they passed withheld possession of it for nearly a hundred out remorse from the confessional to theft years, and it was at last solemnly ceded to and homicide; and that which to other her by the peace of Oliva. The late king ohristians is a restraint, was to them an Charles XI, in his severities toward his encouragement to sin. They are serusubjects, had not spared the Livonians; he pulous against drinking milk during the had deprived them of their privileges, and fast; but the heads of families, the priests, of a part of their patrimony. Patkul, unthe women and the girls intoxicate themhappily celebrated afterwards by his tragselves with brandy during the whole fes io death, was deputed by the Livonian tival. They dispute however concerning nobility to carry to the throne the comtheir religion, as in other countries ; their plaints of the province; he made to his chief a respectful speech, but brave and greatest dispute was whether or not, the laymen should make the sign of the cross full of that manly eloquence which brings with two, or with three fingers. A cercalamity when it is joined to boldness.tain Jacob Nursuff, under the preceding But kings too often regard these public eign had excited a sedition in Astracen. speeches only as vain ceremonies, which it is the custom to endure without paying on the subject of this same dispute. The Czar, in his vast empire had many them any attention. other subjects who were not. Christians. Charles XI, dissimulated, when he The Tartars who inhabited the western would not abandon himself to the transcoast of the Caspian sea, and of the ports of his rage, struck gently on the houlder of Patkul : "You have spoken Sea of Azoff, were Mahometans ; the Sibor your country brave man," said he to erians, the Ostiagues, the Samoiedes, who were in the direction of the Frozen Sea, im: "I honor you for it, continue."--were savages, of whom some were idolat-But, a few days afterwards he was deed and others had not even the knowllared guilty of high treason, and as such, ondemned to death. Patkul, who had edge of a God. and indeed the Swedes, taken among them as prisoners, were concealed himself, took to flight ; he carmore contented with their manners than ried into Poland his resentments. He was with these of the ancient Muscovites. afterwards admitted into the presence of king Augustus, when Charles XI was Peter Alexiowitz had received an cddead ; but the sentence of Patkul and his ucation which tended to increase the barindignation still remained. He reprebarity of this part of the world His -sented to the Polish Monarch the facilinature made him love strangers before he ties for the conquest of Livonia; the peoknew how far they could be of any use plo desperate, ready to throw off the yoke to him. Le Fort, as has already been of Sweden, and a young king unable to said, was the principal instrument he defend himself. These isitements were used, in after days, to change the face of well received by Prince already tempted Muscovy. His powerful genius, which to this conquest. Augustus, at his cor- a barbarous education had not been able nation having promised to use his efforts to to contract, developed itself almost im- was to serve the state only when they recover the provinces that Poland had mediately. He resolved to be a man, to wished. - He established a regular body lost, he thought by his irruption in Li- command men, and to establish a new na- to serve as artillery, and took from the vonia, to please the republic and to tion. Very many princes had before strengthen his power, but he deceived him, him, renounced crowns, through distaste self in these two conclusions which seemed for the weight of business, but no one had a militia most suitable to the Muscovites. so probable: All was soon ready for a ceased to be king, in order to learn bet- Muscovy has to-day (in 1738) thirty regsudden invasion, without deigning a re- ter how to reign ; it was this that Peter iments of dragoons, each numbering a sort, at the beginning, to the vain for- the Great did. malities of a deplaration of war and of He left Russia, in 1698, having reign- he who raised the hussars in Russia. At manifestos. The cloud thickened at the ed but two years, and went to Holland, last he bad even a school of engineers, in Regan. The Czar had not only subjected the church to the state, for an example to the Turkish Sultars, but, much more politic, he had destroyed a militia similar to that of the janissaries : and that which the Ottomans attempted in vain to do, he accomplished in a short time IIe dispersed the Muscovite janissaries called "strelitz" who held the Czars in tutelage.

This militia, more formidable to it masters than to its neighbors, was composed of about thirty thousand infantry, the half of whom remained at Moscow, and the rest were scattered along the frontiers. A strelitz had only four "roubles" a year as pay, but the privileges, or their abuses of them, amply compensated for it. Peter, at first, formed a company of strangers, in which he enrolled him self. and did not disduin to begin as-a drummer boy and to perform his duties as such: so much was the nation in need of examples 1. He was promoted by degrees. He raised little by little, new regiments, and at last; feeling himself ed the strelitz, who dared not disobey. so many virtues. The cavalry was about the same as the cavalry of Poland, and as the French was when France was only an assembly of fifes. The Russian gentlemen mounted themselves at their own expense, and fought without discipline sometimes with no other arms than a sabro or a quiver They were incapable of being commanded, and therefore incapable of conquering. and and the second second Peter the Great taught them to obey, by his example and by punishments; for he served as a soldier and a subaltern. and as Czar, he punished severely the "boyars" that is to say, the gentlemen Such was the Czar Peter. who claimed that the privilege of nobility ohurches five/hundred bells, to make cannons. He formed also abody of dragoons. doing that thing well. thousand men, well maintained. It was the memory of Peter odious, had not the lar to do, had actually drawn pens and good he accomplished for his subjects, al. paper toward him for the purpose of wrimost pardoned his oruelty to his own blood. ting to her.

"What are wages here?" asked a lawhom he had sent as Minister Plenipo- himself a good engineer ; but above all gets tight as a brick !"

Well, he couldn't help-it. Nothing tonished himself, to that house opposite : would come this time but the beginning and he saw the carriage, which was the It is not men of might that we want, "My own dear little Margaret"-such a 'ideal of his visions in that department, ceive hung over him.

that do the most good; but lads, like even though our Margaret may have ex-David, Earnest, active, and strong of seeded the average height of woman. purpose; doing one thing at a time, but

And, of course, as he looked at the fly possibly tell all that those two horror- strange a chance had and the web, his eyes travelled, as they stricken words were meant to express, for when the servant feiched i ulways did, with a persistency which as- a ghastly suspicion had broken upon Mr. went back. Peroival's mind-s suspicion that a fitd It was night and more horriblethan anything he could con- he had watched that but men who use their might-men who long beginning, that it lost, in fact, all drive up and deposit the ladies of Dr. That little scar had been left by the stairs. In the work with zeal and energy at whatever the shapeliness common to beginnings. --- Heath,s Family ; three ladies this time, bite of a dog. It was a fortnight now the rustling of a line. they set themselves to do. It is not the But, for all that, we must feel severally and the third, who was a visitor, report since, in pity to a sereaming child he had den appearance best guilty concerning these two adjectives, had decided to be Mr. Percival's flances. attempted to drive a dog from his path, little creature whom's Then he saw Mr. Percival himself ride and the dog hod snapped at him and pass, but only at a distant up as usual, and noticed that his one hand ed on. He remembered now that the white hands graspi Having written so fur, however, Mr. | was bound up in a handkerchief .- He dog had been killed; and that som idlo ring restraint. Woodfield's ink dried in his pen. He wondered idly what that was for, and rumor about his being mad had floated is was that the could not keep his eyesfrom the window; then, as he watched the young man as for a day or two. Such rumors, however gill who was to he borer of a boy. "I don't know, sir," and the luxurious carriage had just driven sisting the ladies from the carriage, and being common, of course he had nover wife and the way same time on the side of Muscovy.- disguised under a common name, as if he a country where no one before him know "What does your father get on Saturday up with a lady in it-two ladies; the doo- marked how he lingered beside that third once thought of it a second time, never Probably the had The Monarch who governed it, merits at had been a servant of that same Le Fort, even the elements of geometry. He was night?" "Get!" said the boy; "why, ha tor's wife and daughter, he supposed.--- one, who did not yet belong to the family, even experienced a sensation of uncasi-Try his utmost he could not help giving he was conscious of a feeling so nearly pess until now. But now ---(Conclude lascinate "Listen to by eve. "There is n mad. You are st have never been in any way with "No.' "Then there i rus will have less chance, and my treat ment more. Are you capable of follows "Yes."

"Then listen. I know that you ereenergetic and strong-minded. Exert your

James responded: "S

"Did they ever oure?" "Yes." "Sir," said the serv about the lips, "only to Beat In fact, the young man as a corpse, and colorless; faintost dimness was visib "Will he ever bet at it, sie · "Orghtn't he be bound ?" "Orghtn't he be bound ?" "No," said James anteries here when he couce the hipset. Mr. Woodfield well frome.

long. Ho stayed but in stay ments as was absolutein o

often shone up