With pen in hand, I take my stand, To write a little ditty. Of something good, Or something rude, Or something very witty

The protty girls, With auburn curls, And faces sweetly smiling. Shall be the theme On which to dream-Their charms are so beguiling.

The Muses wake, And almost break head, while round me hover Their flapping wings, Me back my dearest lover.

Miss Susan Jane, It gives me pain And oft times I've been thinking, How we might live,

And I would give up drinking. So mote it be! Together we Shall live in fields of clover: I'll change my life, And take a wife, And be a faithful lover.

ATLANTA.

Atlanta, Ga., is the most enterprising city of the South. It contains a population of nearly 30,000, composed largely of Northern tradesmen and mechanics. On the north of it lies a magnificent grain country, the granary of the "Confederacy." and on the south the richest cottonfields of the South. It is the depot of military manufacture for the rebels, and it is said, turns out more war implements and when the stick was gone the enemy of a general assortment than any city in the world.

There are several foundries for the manufacture of cannon, from the smallest to the largest calibre, an immense gun fac tory, where are turned out muskets of the Springfield pattern, and pistol, shot, shell, fixed au:munition and percussion cap manufactories, while the manufacture of wagons, ambulances, gun-carriages, and tavalry and horse equipments, and every thing else necessary for the war, are car ried on to an enormous extent. Besides it is an important railroad centre, four roads communicating and forming a june tion' there-the Western and Atlantic, the Atlantic and Montgomery, the Macon and Western, and the Georgia Railroads

Though Atlanta is said to be strongly fortified by art, it is reported to be much more assailable and less defensible than the successive positions from which the rebels have been driven at Chattanooga, Buzzard's Roost, Dalton and Resaca, in the mountain festnesses of Northern Georgia, which were almost impregnable by nature and had been fortified with great labor.

The Columbus (Ga.) Times (rebel) of April 22d, says:

"The capture of Richmond would prove of greater importance to our enemies in a political point of view than any other sion, we would find additional influence brought to bear against us abroad; but as a material loss its fall would in noman ner compare with the disadvantages which would result from a defeat of General Johnston and the occupation of Georgia that would follow. The first point is near our boundary line; the second is our great centre. To lose the one would be as the loss of a limb; should we be driven from the other it will be a terrible blow at our most vital point. This we must admit, and our enemy knows it."

GENS. MEADE AND GRANT. "Carlton," the war correspondent of the Boston Journal, writing from Cold Harbor, June 5th, says:

"While the cannonade and musketry were rolling so terribly last night, I rode up to Gen. Meade's headquarters. It was past 9 o'clock. The pile of brush on fire in front of Gen. Meade's tent lighted up the main front. Gen. Meade was passing up and down in front of his tent, looking now upon the ground and now upon the flashes lighting the western sky. 'Those are Smith's batteries those are Russell's,' he said, as the batteries, one after another, opened their thunders. 'It is going all right. I should like to have them try it every day and every night,' he continued, listening to

"An aid came in with a telegraphic despatch. Holding it to the light, he read what Hancock had sent: "The firing commenced on the right, ran down the line, and was protty severe in front of my line, but they have done us very little damage. Our loss very "Passing over to Gen. Grant's headquarters, there was a similar scene—the bright camp-fire—the General and his staff sitting around it. Gen. Grant was holding his palf-consumed eigar in his hand, taking now and then a whist, and reading aloud from the Richmond Examiner, of the 3d, a criticism of Grant's campaign-full of falsehoods. The Gen. made comments in the utmost good humor. He was not exercised in the least about what was going on at the front .it was all right thus far, and it would be all right. "How excellent the quality or faculty of keeping cool, especially for a commander of a great army. Gen. Grant is imperturbable—quite as much so as any man I ever saw. When the right wing gave way in that night attack in the Wilderness battle—when the panicstricken men of Rickett's division stream ed shrough the woods-when the tidings of disaster were given from trembling lips. Gen. Grant sat beside a pine tree, whittling as usual. He looked steadily upon the ground, absorbed in thought, thinking as intently as a geometrician over an abstract problem of his favorite science. His demeanor was in striking contrast to those who stood around him. They were restless, listening to every sound, with every, faculty

Dr. Franklin used to say that rich widows are the only pieces of second handgoods that sell at prime cost.

Whittling out Victory. A correspondent thus describes Gen. Grant during the great battle on the Chickshominy, on Friday, the 3d inst: " O it was the longest day !" Orders at 11 o'clock Thursday evening were to open the fight at half past four on the follow ing morning. An hour after midnight, Gen. Grant was roused by Col. Rowley. of his staff, with a word of measage from Gen. Meade. It proved to be a representation from Warren that the men were much exausted with an urgent suggesion that the attack be put off till six -'Tell him he may put it off till five, but by all means he must begin then; and be sure the enumy doesn't get the initia tive." The original order was sound for the enemy took the initiative at a quarter before five. "Oit was the longes day!" Despite the popular idea that Grant smokes all the time, it is worth nothing that he didn't smoke much that day. He whittled. Orderles and aids day. He whittled. Orderles and aids were riding in hot haste, the blazing sun poured down upon the knoll where head-quarters were, corps commanders were sending in messages every few minutes, the great roar of the greatest battle fought y the Army of the Potomac crashed everywhere; but to all outward appear ance Gen- Grant was cool, calm and un occupied. The skin is so drawn over his forehead that wrinkles there don't show when he is perp'exed; and his beard so hides his mouth that no nervousness there betrays his thought. So he sat and whittled-cutting away his stick with leisurely, measured, meditative strokes, much of the time; but turning his knife and cutting at the end neares himself with short, clipping strokes when ever word came of important change i the chances of battle. Thus he fought the great contest with knife and stick,

WIT FROM THE PULPIT: It is related of a certain New England divine who flourished not many years ago, and whose matrimonial relations were supposed not to be of the most agreeable kind, that one sabbath morning, while reading t his congregation the parable of the supper in which occurs this presage: "and anoth er said, I have bought five yoke of oxen and I go to prove them; I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore cannot come -he suddenly paused at the end of this verse, drew off his spectacles, and looking round on his hearers, said, with great em phasis: "The fact is my brethern, one woman can draw a man farther from the kingdom of heaven than five yoke of ox

18 A colchrated general besieging place, the governor capitulated, after a slight resistance. When the governor walked out, he said to the general, "1 will confess to you, in confidence, that I only asked you to capitulate because I wanted powder."-- "To return your confidence," answered the general, "I only granted your demand because I wanted

The grave buries every errorcovers every defect-extinguishes every resentment. From its peaceful bosom springs none but fond regrets and tender recollections. Who can look down upon the grave of an enemy, and not feel a compunctious throb, that he should have warred with the poor handful of earth that lies mouldering before him?

The poorest education that teaches self control is better than the best that ne-radical cure (without medicine) of Spermaforrhea, or seminal Weskness, Involuctary Seminal Lossos, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriago, etc; also, Consumption. Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by selfindulgence or sexual extravagance.

Price, in a seared envelope, only 0 cents.
The celebrated author in tals admirable assay clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous u-e of internal medicine or the application of the knife—pointing out a mode of cure, at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which avery sofferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself chesply, privately and radically.
