ney; he can make anything. She now introduced Mr. Whitney to her friends who described to him the difficulties under which they labored .--He told them he had never seen a god of cotton in his life. Without giving them any promises, he resolved to produce some raw cotton forthwith, and see what he could do with it. Searching about the wharves of Savanah, he found, at length, some uncleaned cotton, and taking home a bundle of it in his hands, he shut himself up in a room in the basement, and set to work to invent the machine required. All the winter, he labored in his solitary cell. There were no proper tools to be had in Savanah. He made his own tools. There was no wire. He made his own wire. The children, the servants, the visitors to the house wondered what he could be doing in the basement all alone; but he said nothing and kept on tinkering, hammering, and thinking, till, early in the spring of 1793, he had completed his work. Having set up the mysterious machine in a shed, he invited a number of planters to come and witness 'its operation. Its success was complete. The gentlemen saw, with unbounded wonder and delight, that one man, with this young Yankee's engine, could clean as much cotton in one day as a man could clean by hand in a whole winter.-The cotton grown on a large plantation could be separated from the seed in a few EYRE & LANDELL days, which before required the constant labor of a hundred hands for several months. Thus was the cotton-gin invented. The principle was so simple that the wonder was that no one had thought of it before. The cotton was put into a large trough, the bottom of which was formed of wires placed in parallel rows, so close together that the seed could not pass through .---Under this trough saws revolved, the teeth of which thrust themselves between the wires and snatched the cotton through, leaving the seed behind, which ran out in a stream at one end of the trough. The simplicity of the cotton-gin had two effects; one good, the other bad.— The good effect was that, in the course of a very few years it was introduced all over the cotton States, increased the value of all the cotton and raised the Southern The simplicity of the cotton-gin had all the cotton, and raised the Southern States from hopeless depression to the greatest prosperity. The effect was as lasting as it was sudden. In 1793 the whole export of cotton from the United States was ten thousand bales. In 1859 the exports was five millions of bales .-Men acquainted with the subject are of opinion that this single invention has been opinion that this single invention has been worth to the South one thousand millions of dollars. How much did the inventor gain by it? Not one dollar! Associating him. self with a man of capital, he went to Connectiout to set up a maufactory of cotton-gins.
