I fought earnestly and vigorously for the suc cess of the principles it advocated, but it never once attempted treason in order t prove that the affairs of the country could not prosper under the administration of its opponents. It accepted power without abas ing its trust; it suffered defeat without losing its lovally. It could have maintained its organization without incurring teproach for any measure it had advocated, but when the people decided against its policy and its leaders in terms not to be misunderstood, it refrained from a longer agitation concerning them. Such was the example set by a party which numbered amongst its leaders some of the greatest and noblest of earth's sons. virtue and patriotism were beyond even susnicion

Will the Democracy follow the example of the party against which they contended country of an organization which can no longer commend itself to the people's confidence? Nourmahal enchanted her liege lord in How long will they be willing to endur defeat, without even being cheered by the pos where. sibility of victory? Their assurance has heretofore been most marvellous-will they now make th ir foolish persistence as great a marvel? One would have thought that men with ordinary understanding would never have attempted to foist to power, in loyal

States, the rear guard of a party, whose main b dy and leaders had gone boldly over into the camp of treason. Yet this folly was kept up for four years, and those who engaged in it appeared as sanguine of success as if they had embarked in the most rational enterprizes conceivable. Defeats never seemed to intimidate them. They appealed to the people for support with an assurance that almost deserved success for its own sake .---Democrats had rebelled, and, therefore, Democsats should be trusted with power. Abolitionists were in power, using their energies to suppress civil war and enforce obedience to law, therefore Abolitionists were disturbers of the country's peace and should be deposed. Democrats organized rebellion, and therefore Democrats should be entrusted with subduing it. Democrats made all the States they controlled treasonable nate the system of human slavery, which and revolutionary, and therefore all other States should be placed under their control, in order that conservatism, loyalty and constitutional Government might be secured to them. Such insults to the common sense and loyalty of the people of the North have been repeated ever since the rebellion began. Will not their last overwhelming reverse teach the Democracy to discontinue them will serve, but for us and our house we wil teach the Democracy to discontinue them for ever?
