It is a porpetual Burner, and perfect Radiator, as well as a perfect Ventilator of the room, and is warnined to consume less cal than any other Stove of the same size, ever offered to the public, requiring but one ordinary sentled small coal once in twenty-eight hours, boing perfectly simple in all its working, having a simple silde to regulate the fire for keeping at night, one sinding of fire being all that is required durit, who winter. No dust, no gas, no slag or cinder.

combistion within the fire-pot (whether it be of ant or stows lise), which is the only way to burn Afteriate coal to advantage. Different sizes of coal require more or less depth for perfect combustion.

2—A Funnel, or Hopper, for the passage of the coal to the magazine is so arranged as to permit the introduction. of fresh coal, without allowing any casespo of fumes and gas into the room; and further, when the Stove is left with its top uncovered, compelling any fumes that may escape from the supply in the reservoir, upwards to its top, to pass over the top of the reservoir, upwards to its top, to pass over the top of the reservoir, upwards to its top, to pass over the stop of the reservoir into the surrounding flue, and so to the base and outlet.

3—A Fire-lot with a continuous Flue, over its entire upper edge and down its whole body to the base and outlet flues! y which means the heat is transmitted, not in repurate flues several inches apart, as is usual in downward draft Stoves, but by a continuous sheet of flame in contact, with the entire circumference of the otter casing of the Stove, from the top of the Fire-Pot downwards, giving a far more oxtended surface of radiation of the heat that any downward draft Stove extant.

4—An ample Graft Stursee and Air Passages, and a complete arranged Grate, for shaking and dumping, with a good size Ash Pan to receive the cashes and cluder.
