"The sable goddess Night, had stretched be leaden sceptre o'er a slumbering world," when the College Chapel was filled to overflowing with both ladies and surprise. An announcement had been made that the Sophomore Class of Dick would sacrifice to their hatred one of the books studied by them during the past term, H. N. Dry's Art-of-Composition, and multitudes thronged to witness this novel but intensely solumn ceremony. Just as the expectation of the spectators was at its height, the mournful beat of the muffled drum mingled with the mer try been found to meet the wants of man—Aye effects at the supplication of the class was heard reverberating through the halls of the building. The procession advanced slowly and solemnly up the Chapel aisle bearing at its head an altar draped with black, upon which was placed the book, and an urn for the reception of the astes of the sacrifice. The pall-bearers for the loccasion, was a Mark, and Wm. H. Dashiell, of Baltimore, Md. The class being seated, the assembly was planed to order by Mr. W. T. L. Keiffor, of Carlisle, Pa., who delivered some very appropriate remarks concerning the nature of the ceremony, and explained the order of exercises for the oceasion.

The first order was the History of H. N. Day, and his Art, which was composed and read by Mr. J. M. Belford, Mifflin, B. S. S. Sellows. Pa., as follows.

Why this gathering? What means Why this gathering? What means this alter bearing its prepared victim?—Tell me too, what testify these grim ghostlike forms? On each countenance, cound, you see it, you would behold the impression of a strange comingling of lo. e and hatred. On each heart could you but read its sentiment you would find written the same; the state that everal lerge with force of light. chiment you would find written the same; hearts that swell large with love of light, but larger still with hatred of Day. A strange anomaly! Loving, yet hating that same object of love; praising, yet—uttering-wrathful-imprecations; blessings—yet—never-deigning to give a word of commendation. Such is the spirit in which we come here to-night.

Such is the spirit in which we come here to-night.

Sixteen weeks ago there appeared one in our midst, whose coming we hailed with joy. Evidently our visitor was no child of darkness. With him he bore the impress of light. Doubtless he sprang from parents who rendered bright their mortal careers; and at death were placed in heave as a glorious constellation, which should preside over the Day, Surely at least this

Never has a stranger Art, composed by a stranger man, been placed in the liands of the college Student. Sophomores can grasp the idea of one line being perpendicular to another in space, or indeed they may clearly comprehend the hypothetical peried, but when you tell them that a spiritual chiect is a mass, you transcend iritual object is a mass, you transcenheir comprehension, both finite and Agiin there is brought within ou vision, by the author, a very learned discourse on symbols of thought, symbols of touch, taste and smell, symbols of sight, symbols of sound, symbols from general sense, (the symbols for nonsense are omitted,) and finally the law of symbols, all very interesting topics of course. Day after day, Bro. Day and the class of "71" after day, Bro. Day and the class of "71" are more at sword-points with each othe: Higher and higher swells the tide of wrath. Another point attracts the attention as well as the admirable classification of the class. The admirable classification of the book is brought forth in bold relief and made the subject of many fine comments of chapters, sections, 1, 2, 3, 4, major, 1, 2, 3, 4, minor, it is useless to make mention.

Wonderful it is indeed that we do not go into primes, seconds and thirds. After uselessly attempting to remember these classifications, and taxing the brain to the utmost, we conclude it to be a perfectly systematical, mathematical classification,

Now rage has reached its height, 'and from the highest pinnacle looks down upon an action of the class with expressions of satisfaction and admiration. One strontand mighty cries out, awry with him, 'let us burn him." An action is suited to treword, and pouning forth vials of wrat against the work we determine to.

Be wise to-Day: Tis madness to defer, Having thus stated briefly the faults we find, we wish him a prosperous Day's journey.

The sacrifice was consummated in becoming style by consuming the Rook with fire from the censor of the Priext, Mr. D. K.

Watson, of Loudon, Va.

The ashes were then deposited in an urn order that they might be presented in due form to the Faculty of the institution. Immediately preceding the burning the following remarks were delivered by the Priest;

Fit times are these to do grave deeds. The darkness doth help to consecrate to a set. In union have we come ferth O Pluto, to sacrifice to the this most deserving object of our wrath.

Filled with recoil ctions of his actior and relations to us, we freely consign her work as an offering to one who rules over the realms of endless darkness. Where there shall be Day, even though no light.

After prayer the following Sermon was delivered by Mr. D. K. Boas, of Carliadin a wonderfully solemn manner during the most profound silence and attention. SERMON.

To night, fit time for a deed so mournful

To night, fit time for a deed so mournful, will we gather round the sacrificial pyre, and to the flames far brighter than his rays will we commit the life work of a Day. Around the altar here we meet, a sorrowing band, the tatthful few, who mournthe exit of a friend, whose merits hererto fore have been unknown, because misunderstood or unexplained.

The light which H. N. Day, has shed on our paths, feeble as it was, has still one mort; that of constancy. His beams shine brighter as the sun declines, or when the intervening moon obscures from sight the rays of that King of day. As travellers in Egyptian high the bold with loy the glow-worm's feeble spark, so we, when we are lost in the darkness of mind, without one ray to guide the mental man, will we gladly welcome the Day. Till then, he pales his ineffectual fires"—till then he astes his sweetness on the desert air, and name immortal, when we, who now are gathered here to celebrate these solemn rites, have mingled our ashes with its kin-dred dust.

But until then, let us exercise an option to accept or reject what is, with the light we have at present, a vague, unintelligible, chimerical conglomeration of ideas, origi-nal it is true, but which serve only to pr plex and embarrass the student in his search for light. It is said that his Exemplar, Phillip's book the offspring of an offspring doth bear unmistakable testimony of light—impenetrable.

Ho-came to us as a stranger, and as a stranger we took him in, little expecting that he would return the joke with compound interest. For while we were fast friends, he promised to be our leader and guide, and as such we followed him, us an individual, through mass and class. But soon we noticed that we were being enveloped in an inextricable maze. He led us the trugged hill of abstract and concrete, will be consigned and his vain ambition. The felic of his labors to devouring elements up the rugged hill of abstract and concrete, will we consign and hild fare well to its few mained of Day.

So finded his glory, so failed his hopes, so perished all his vain ambition. The relic of his labors to devouring elements will we consign, and bid farewell to its few attractions. We leave it to our successors. The legacy is one which coming Sopho-mores may inherit, and it may be that their foolish-wisdom-may discover what we have failed to find—the sterling worth of Art of Composition.

Farewell, and peace to thy ashes!
The procession was then formed in the College Hall, the members of the Sophomore class with their Priest ahead, swinging a censor burning "red Fire," marching immediately after the altar, and the other classes, with friends and visitors in the

The effects produced by these brilliant lights in the deep darkness of the night through the long walks of the Campus shaded by majestic old trees was magnificent. It resembled a living, moving column of flame steadily but irresistably advancing. The tolling of the College bell added very materially to the deep and marked solemnity of the procession.

Extra a Co.—Gentiemen: In reply to yours of the 22d inst., I would say that I have used Dr. Stover's Totle Herb Bitters extensively in my practical form of flame steadily but irresistably advancing. The tolling of the College bell added very materially to the deep and marked solemnity of the procession.

The procession advanced to the gas works where the sacrificial ceremony was to be performed in a manner altogether in accordance with its grave nature. The sacrifice was consummated in becom-thought. (All grim and pale doth stand our own dear idiom at sight of this grim monster. Untaught before of modals and monster. Unfaught before of modals and convretes of such prodigious size as this book has, we wish to sympathize with Pinner and green,) oh! great archer 'gainst our idlom, well-may we give thee up and pray, great Plute drag thee down with mournful car and train, to orcus, and far within the seventh circle let Aquilonian blasts blow hottest, flames of hell upon thy face through the revolving cycles of eternity.

Immediately after the burning the fol-lowing remarks to Pluto were delivered by the same official.

Well hast thou pleased us, O. Pluto, in thy acco ance of our offering. The life of this book is gone, but its essence, the vital part shall still live on. With hearts of this county.

The following Ode composed by Mr.
G. C. Young, of Harrisburg, Pa., was then sung by the Class.

ODE. Let Sophies all with one accord Lament for H. N. Day. Who never wanted a good word, From those, who none could say.

He strove the Sophies well to please, With Actions mazing stunning, And never followed sinful ways, Unless when he was punning.

His look was sought I do aver—
By all the scholars and Profs.
Poor Dick herself has had a share,
In blinding the poor Sophs.

And now his Art and beauty fied, His parasites fied all, The students found when he was dead, His last disorder mortal.

The procession was then reformed and

The procession was then reformed and returned in the same grave and solemn style to the College Chapel.

It is due to all present to make favorable mention of the wenderful solemnity displayed by all, particularly those more immediately connected with this deeply interesting ceremony.

A spirit of deep sadness and gloom appeared to pervade the entire vast assemblings and manifested itself in the most striking manner in their rigid docorum, both during the exercises in the Chapel and their march to the place of shorifice.

We are delighted to observe that the mantle of the preceding Sephomore Class has fallen upon worthy shoulders, and that they have andieved a brilliant repetition of what had been initiated by the Class of '70.

All who witnessed the veremony were delighted with its success, and unite with us in wishing that many Sephomore Classes may cherish the same enthusiastic spirit of striving to emulate their spirited predecessors.

Lancaster, Pa', May 25, 1868.

"Having oursorlly inspected the fine assortment of longes exhibited to me by Dr. Bernbardt, and having its description of the mode of adapting them to the different wants and conditions of the eye, Lum persuaded that he possesses much knowledge of the science of Opties and skill in the application of its principles to the purpose of his profession,

Pastor of Lutheran Church.

Lineaster, Pa. May 25, 1808.

I have examined a great variety of Chasses monufactured by Dr. M. Bertibardt, and, in justice to him, must ray, hat his glasses are of a superior quality, adapted to meet the wants of aimose very eye, which the cloted for me a pair of his Australian Crystall Glasses, which are of n very superior quality and work massle for medicing vision very distinct, and aimost as perfect, as in youth. I yield this testimony in favor of the Doctor's Glasses most cheerfully, as well from my own experience as from the testimonials of many your experience as from the testimonials of many physicians, elergymen and other gentlemen, with waom I am porsonally acquainted.

JRO. L. ATLEE, M. D. L. ATLE

I have examined what I conceive to be a complete as cortment of spectacles, manufactured from the Australian Crystal, admirably adapted to the Waxious infirmatics of that exquisitely collecte orgap, the human eye, whicher the impaired vision is the result of disease or the natural weakness incident to old sgo. I regard the specimens of Dr: Bornhardt the best I have ever seen, and as such cheerfully recommend them.

Lancaster, Pa., May 25, 1868.

I have examined Dr. M. Berningtt's very complete assortment of, Speciacles and Lenses, and find them admirably adapted to remedy such imperfections of vision as can be benefitted by the skill of the Optician. The material used in the manufacture of his Glassen is of romarkable purity and beauty, rad adds very much to their value, I recommend him with great cheerfulness to the confidence of all who may require his services.
