The Carlisle Herald.

CARLISLE, OCTOBER 8, 1869. We beg to express our obligations to

of which we copy. THE CARLISLE HERALD of Fridaylast came out with a neat, plain head and an entirely new dress. It looks remarkably well in its new suit, and we trust the Republicans of Cumberland will appreciate as it deserves the enterprise of the editors. THE HERALD is one of the best Republican papers in the State and deserves to be well patronized.

-Harrisburg Telegraph. THE CARLISLE HERALD came to u last week with new heading and with new type. The change is very decided, and THE HERALD will now compare fayorably with any paper in the State. Although a popular paper under the old management, the new proprietors are evidently determined to make it still more so. -Bloomfield Times.

THE CARLISLE HERALD comes to us this week dressed in the latest and most artistic style. Its new editors are able in every respect to keep up its past reputation and win additional honors in the future. You have a hard county to work in, gentlemen, but if you have the success you deserve, the Democracy will soon lose their power.

-Franklin Repository. For these and other similar notice much thanks. We still hope further to improve the HERALD and make it deserve the kind notices of our friends.

On Saturday last our noon markets began to continue Deo volente, until the first of May. Our people can now purchase as much beef, pork, mutton, sweet potatoes, pine knots, apples, and cabbages as they can consume or pay for, without being roused from their beds at all sorts of unsuitable and demoralizing hours. These day markets, by the way, are pretty marked evidence of advancing civilization. It seems almost incredible now that sane persons, until within a few years, did their marketing by starlight through the whole Winter. Through the rain and snow, the cutting winds and driving sleet as early as four o'clock in the morning, our people yawning, gaping, and occasionally swearing, could be seen twice a week making their way to the market sheds, where, after a yast amount of scrambling, they filled their baskets, and returned home, still many hours too early for any useful employment, except cooling down tempers sadly ruffled by their market adventures. Some eight years ago some progressive chap suggested, that markets might possibly be held in daylight without very serious injury to the peace and dignity of the community. Of course the conservatives were horrifled. Markets in daylight—good gracious, it will never do; Farmers wont attend markets in daylight—they can't afford to lose the time. We'll have no markets at all. People have n't time to attend market in daylight. These new fangled ideas will play the deuce with everything. We have always gone to market in the dark—what 's the reason we can 'i do so still? Finally, however, our Council passed an ordinance changing the market hour to noon. But conservatism was n't going to the wall in that style by any means. . The Council could pass an ordinance, but the Burgess must sign it before it was a law. The Burgess pass when the good people of the town could get their supplies without doing the penance of early rising for it. The Courts were applied to, and a mandamus on the refractory Burgess came forth. That did n't matter, however. The valiant municipal executive refused to sign. What was the use of being a burgess if von could n't resist the Court. Finally, an attachment issued from the temple of justice, and as if suddenly struck with new light, all objections to the ordinance ceased, and it became a law..... People now slept as soundly, until their usual rising hour, on market as on other days. When noon came they went to market. Strange to say, the butchers were there in force-the farmers some how found time from their other work to attend-everybody filled his basketeverybody managed to get along, as well and comfortably, as if no other hour than noon had ever seen a market. True, the discipline of early rising, of groping find time to inspect its working. along the dark streets, of examining meat and butter and vegetables by the light of a candle, of getting counterfeit coin and currency run on you in the dark, with all its improving effects on health and temper, was lost, but then we can't always have with us all the advantages of our earlier civilization, and, therefore this great loss was borne with fortitude and resignation. And, now, as we have been cultivated in this spirit to endure the afflictions of a daylight market could n't we make up our minds to submit to the imposition of a new market house, that would hold some where about half the people and half the provision that collect on Wednesdays and aturdays, and give them a semblance of protection from rain and snow.

Persons in all parts of the county are requested to correspond with us, and give whatever of local interest may occur in their neighborhoods. Those who send us marriages or deaths, notices of fairs dedications of churches, religious and temperance notices, proceedings of meetings, &c., are informed that we make no charge therefor. Such favors are always concerfully published. Persons sending us communications must give their names -not for publication, but as a guaranty of the truthfulness of what they writeor no notice will be taken of them.

We are glad to learn that Harry Elliott has been appointed train master on the Cumberland Valley Railfoad. Mr. E. is a young, energetic gentleman, and highly esteemed by all who know him : and as conductor of the first freight train ac quitted himself so as to win the respect of all the forwarding merchants alon the entire line. Assuredly, Harry, there are still more rungs left in your ladder.

We inadvertently forgot to mention sooner that Stophen A. Lightcap, suc--- ceeds R. A. Sharp, deceased, as conducto on the evening mail train; on the C. V. R. R. The appointment is well deserved, and will give general satisfaction to the traveling public.

Hon. Asa Packer attended the State air at Harrisburg on Thursday last. His coming had been announced for weeks previously and yet no demonstraions greeted him He passed from the lepot to his hotel, from his hotel to the ir ground and return, as little noticed as any man in the crowd. If Asa enjoys himself most when least noticed, his trip to the State Capital must have been one of analloyed pleasure. `Ho was in fact left severely alone. The rank and file of his party cared not to gaze on a man, whose millions of money had barely secured him the nom ination. The hungry followers who generally follow in the wake of candidates, suspected that Asa loved money much to well to throw it, around loosely among them; whilst the men who are apt to fawn on the men of po ver and place, know well enough that his chances for election were far to few to justify them in pay ing him court at this time. But little as ne was noticed last Friday, he will have fewer to do him honor after next week. His defeat will drive from him by theft; or telling some other plaintive even those who for the party's good now

Oh ne, made a most eloquent and 'effective speaker who has so many of the requisites of a popular stump orator as Mr. Williams. His speech was replete with arguments, and abounded in eloquent and telling passages. His anecdotes and sallies of wit were irresistible, and never failed to elicit most hearty applause. On Monday last a large detachment of troops was sent from the Carlisle Barracks. There were about three hundred of them, and they were sent to the Eighth Cavalry at San Francisco, via the Pacific Railroad. They were escorted to the Gas Works by the band, and attended by many of their friends, both male and emale, who seemed sorry to part with them. They themselves did n't seem to mind it much, however, as they al appeared to be in the gayest humor. When the train started they cheered for Omaha most lustily. We hope the boys may be as happy during their whole ter
