Yet the yield is very large. The wheat crop of 1869 is estimated a 271,000,000 bushels, the corn crop at 1.050,000,000 bushels, that of oats at 300,000,000 bushels, and that of potatoe at 175,000,000 bushels. To those must be added barley, the value of which for the year is estimated at $45,000,000; hay of which we have seen no just estimate and a crop of wool estimated at 177,000. 000 pounds, besides fruits, vegetables butter cheese, and animals. Of all thes crops, the Northwest produces by far the largest share. Recent tables in the Financial Chronicle showed that while the grain product of Massachusetts is but two dollars and twenty-five cent per capita, and that of New York only fifteen dollars ner canita, the product of Iowa is seventy-two dollars for every person of its population, and the average of the Northwest is over sixty dollar per capita. If, in addition, we count the products of the Southwest also, the cotton, rice, tobacco, and homp, the Democrat hinks the Mississippi Valley produces each year agricultural crops in value far greater than the whole national debt.
