COSTLY HOUSE AND FURNITURE. A New York correspondent of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican writes: I was talking with a man the other day, Indianola, and at Shreveport and other from whom I learned some facts illustrative of the vast increase of luxurious tastes in this city of late years. He is a German decorative artist, and devotes himself exclusively to making designs for the most expensive kinds of furniture. Some idea of his scale of prices, and the cars are looked forward anxiously to, to kind of work he does, may be formed from the following figures: A carved wooden pedestal for a piece of sculpture, cost $900; an upright piano, carved in prove successful every market east of the bas relief, $1,400; a sideboard; $3,000; a French bedstead, $1,900, and an oak etagere, claborately ornamented, $4,000.
