THOSE TERRIBLE CATS.-Two weeks since the following arithmetical problem appeared in the columns of the Herald : how many cats will kill 100 rats in 100 miles south-west of Carlislor will sell at.

answers to this question since its appearance in these columns, but want of room forbids giving them in detail. Some showed conclusively (to their own minds) that it would require at least 100 mover, drill, gears, &c. cats to do the work; others asserted that it would give employment to 800 cats, a boy in Washington says one wheat flour and oven dried corn meal. cat. All of which are incorrect. A young friend in Stoughstown answers 'three cats." which, is correct. The question has been thoroughly discussed. by almost every person young and old in our borough.

The following is our solution of this | 501, dealer in foreign and domestic dried, vexed question: If three cats kill three canned and green fruits, dried meats, rats in three minutes, one cat will kill outs, vegetables, oysters, poultry, &c. one rat in three mmutes; therefore in 100 minutes, each cat will kill as many rats as three is contained in one hundred, which is 331 rats; if each cat kills 334 rats in 100 minutes, three cats will kill three times 331, or 100 rats in 100 minutes. Trusting that this vexatious problem may have benefitted our young A boy to work under instructions at friends we dismiss the subject.
