It is one of the remarkable facts of this remarkable age, not merely that so many persons are the victims of dyspepsia or indigestion, but its willing victims. Now, we would not be understood to say that any one regards dyspepsia with fayor, or tris disposed to rank it among the luxuries of life. Far from it. Those who have experienced its torments would scout such an idea. All dread it, and would gladly dispense with its unpleasant familiarities. Mark Tapley, who was jolly under all the trying circumstances in which he was placed, never had an attack of dyspepsia, or his joility would have specific fortunes uncomplainingly, but whoever, head of a person who enjoyed them?

Of all the multifarious disenfare to which the human expitent is label, there is perhaps no one so generally prevalent as dyspepsia. There are discaved more acute fang philadly, and which more frequently prova fatal; but none, the officets of which are so depressing to the mind and so positively distressing to the body. Respectfully,

14mh72tlap J. & W. B. GREEN. But it is not our intention to descant on the horrors of Dyspiepsia. To describe them truthfully is simply an impossibility, but it is possible to point out a remody. We have said that dyspepsials is perhaps the most universal of human diseases. This is emphatically the case in the United States. Whether this general prevalence is due to the character of the food, the method of its preparation, or the hasty manner til which it is usually swallowed, is not our gravines to explain. The great fact with which we are called to deal is this: ARETAIL
