Up, Brothers, Up.

BY C. D. STUART.

Up, brothers, up! the light begins Along the eastern sky, To promise that the night is past, And better days are nigh; A clarion voice rings o'er the hills, The valleys catch the sound-And freedom is the stirring cry That fill the world around!

It pierces through the fading gloom, Its strength the peasant feels-And old oppression from its throne With shame and terror reels; All men lift up their hands, More fearless and more free, And foud rings out the common shout, No more we'll bend the knee!

From smithy-forge, from fisher's cot, From ploughs that break the lea, From iron looms, from smoky mines, From ships that cleave the sea-One voice unites, and mightier Sweeps on and ever on; The tyrant' day, the vassal's work, Are gone! forever gone!

Up, brothers, up! and share the light, Rejoice the day has come, When freedom decks the lowest shrine, And guards the poorest home, Rejoice, and pledge with strengthening tie The new born heart and mind, To keep the bond and pass it on To all of human kind.

Rejoice that ye have broke at length The strong and heavy chain, Which neither age nor human strength Can bind ye with again; Rejaice, and swear ye will not bend,

Nor give the guerdon back, Though glistening steel disputes the way, And flame is on your track!

From the Lady's Dollar Newspaper. I Love the Girls.

BY MAURICE O'QUILT.

I love the girls-I love them all: The gay, the fair, the sad and meek; Their eyes of blue, that skies recall, Or those so dark that love bespeak. I love them all in silks arrayed. Or neatly decked in homely trim; For every one hath charms displayed, Silks ne'er enhance, or shred bedim.

I love them all-for all can smile, And speed the gloom from brows that tir And all have hands for tender toil, To pet the babe, or ease the sire. Each hath a heart to feel and throb, To share our woes, or pleasant hours; To laugh our glee, or with us sob, And call its own our lights and showers.

I love them all-I love their joy, Their romping bouts, and carele ss song; And could not look with frowning eye Upon their freaks in gleesome throng. I love their laugh, its silvery peel, For it proclaims life can be bright; That sunny gleams can sweetly steal

Amid the gloom of this world's night. I love them all-and who does not?

For all "creation's lords" have known. la suffering's whiles, or dismal lot, The soothing cares w hich are their own. Then love them all with all your might, And evil thoughts which souls degrade,

Or sorrow's parg with venomed bite, Your hallowed hearts will ne'er invade!
