

WHAT! NEVER BE SAD?

What! never be sad? Shall we always be gay Where misery's seen at each step that we take:

Say, shall we not weep for our brethren's

'Tis well to be happy and ne'er to be sad, Yet here where such sorrows are seen, That heart which at all times is joyous and glad, Little sympathy hath it, I ween.

'Tis well that a tear should many times flow, It will prove our friendship sincere; For our hearts fond, affections when outward

Are often expressed in a tear. The young may not weep, yet the aged can

Though a smile makes the heart to seem glad, That thoughts of the past that within us do dwell Of makes the same heart to be sad.

When the tie of affection seems sundered in

When the soul hath ascended on high, When with us are those who have labored in vain

To save-is it wrong then to sigh? That friend may be far more happy than we, Yet we cannot restrain the full tear, That will flow when we think, though happy he be.

No more shall we meet with him here.

There's a time for laugh, a time to be gay, A time when the heart should o'erflow With a rapturous mirth, in a joyous way, There's a time for all this as I know-Yet there is a time when we should be sad, When our tears should freely fall, We cannot in life be always glad, Eince to weep is the lot of all.

THE COMMON LOT.

BY MONTGOMERY

Once in the flight of ages past There lived a man-and who was he? Mortal! howe'er thy lot be cast, That man resembled thee!

Unknown the region of his birth. The land in which he died unknown, His name hath perished from the earth, This truth survives alone:

That joy, and grief, and hope and fear, Alternate triumphed in his breast; His bliss and woe, a smile, a tear! Oblivion hides the rest.

The bounding pulse, the languid limb, The changing spirits rise and fall, We know that these were felt by him, For THESE are felt by all.

He suffered -but his pange are o'er, Enjoyed-but his delights are fled, Had friends-his friends are now no more And foes-his foes are dead.

He loved-but whom he loved, the grav-

Hath lost in its unconscious womb; O shs was feir! but nought could save Her beauty from the tomb.

The rolling seasons, day and night, Sun, moon and stars, the earth and main Ere while his portion, life and light. To him exist-in vain.

He saw whatever thou hast seen. Encountered all that troubles thee, He was-whatever thou has been, He is-what thou shalt be!

The clouds and sunbeams o'er his eye That once their shade and glory threw Have left in yonder silent sky No vestige where they flow.

The annels of the human race, Their ruin since the world began Of HIM afford no other trace Than this-THERE LIVED & MAN.

AGBICULTURAL.

Agricultural Investigations.

When the various crops in the field are made matters of study, they possess a value and interest distinct from the amount of money they bring in. They become one's teachers; they give him lessons to be treasured up and used; and it is those only who seek to learn and benefit by these lessons, who really are intelligent and exemplary farmers. A few, by dint of unwearied toil, from year to year, and by a soul-pinching parsimony, may get money; and this, too, without observing any lessons, excepting a few brief ones which were inculcated by others while they were young. But those who stick to the old way, through thick and thin, for no other reason than because it is the old way, are not good farmers; they are little more than common laborers, who by dint of perseverance get some money, but little else worth having. We are not ridiculing the old ways, but only saying large assortment of they should be compared with new ones. That the old are, in many cases, the best, is undoubtedly true. If is only by com paring them, that one can justify himself fairly and properly, which path will lead him most directly to the desired object.

Does the cornfield yield a better crop, when you spread all the manure, or or small? How many stocks should be left in a hill? How many hills upon the acre give the largest crop? Is it best to plant in hills or in drills? For potatoes is it best to spread all the manure? Or will you put it in the hill? If in the hill, will you have it below or above the seed? Are hills or drills best? Do you cut the seed or plant it whole? Do you put the seed deep in the earth, or do you keep it near the suface?

Is grass seed best sown with grain in the spring? Of will you sow it in August or September? Or will you seed down to grass with your wheat, whether in spring or fall?-Will you simply turn over you bound out grass land, top-dress and put on grass seed? Which, of all these is the safest or most profitable.?

Shall your manure be plowed under the sod, or will you, after plowing, put it on the top, and harrow it in? Do you find the most benefit from it when you use it fresh from the barn, or when you let it ferment and pulverize before it goes upon the land? These and and a thousand other questions are disputable, and correct answers to most of them, you must learn, by observations upon your own land, and the lands of your neighbors. If we will but use our experience, and our common sense, in connexion with books, we shall find the books to be valuable aids -Maine
