"'Tis folly in the extreme to till Extensive fields and till them ill; Shrewd common sense sits laughing by, And sure your hopes abortive die, For more one fertile acre yields, Than the huge breadth of barren fields."

Some have recommended millet as an excellent article for turning in; but of all Peter M'Guire deceased offers for sale cultivated crops, with the exception perhaps of red clover, I consider buck wheat the best. By commencing early, three crops of this grain may be turned in, in one season-a dressing which will be found sufficient, under ordinary circumstances, for the most exhausted soil, and which is by no means objectionable on the score of expense or cost.

From the Germantown Telegraph. Bushes around Cultivated Lands.

It is a very common thing that, in some sections, to see the borders and corners of fields cultivated in cereals, and in grass, overrun with bushes. This is a bad practice and no correct farmer will allow it to greater remove from the parent stock ev- ing of upon and occupy the field. A rod or so of good fertile land around a large field, is of no small value, and should be cultivated and made to produce something of value to the owner, instead of being a disgrace and expense to him. When these occupants have been permitted to stand for several years, extending their roots, and acquiring annually new size and energy, they become formidable tenants, and most farmers contemplates their removal as a task too onerous, and expensive to be at-

as they appear, every succle the roots put time. forth. This, in a short time, will utterly annihilate them, and the soil be cleansed for the action and amelioration of the plow. ON LO LO LO Old fields are often defaced by clumps of bushes in open sections-generally around stumps or ledges or heaps of stones. After attaining a size to large for the scythe, they are generally neglected, and permit- Fresh from the Easters Markets at ted to occupy the soil to the exclusion of a profitable vegetation, without any attempt whatever to coerce or arrest their growth. No correct farmer will permit the existence of these evils.

Revolting Disclosures as to a Burial Place .- Potter's Field, at New York, where are buried the poor paupers from abroad, and all who cannot afford to bury themselves, is become so disgusting and intolerable a nuisance, that the Grand Jury have made it the subject of a present ment-calling upon the common council to stop further interments, as it ascertained the number of corpses are already seven thousand to the acre! Horrid. The Presentment says:

"The thin soil is trenched for the reception of the dead, and tiers of seven or eight coffins are piled one on another, up to and above the surrounding surface. Over the tops of these a little earth is thrown, but so partially, that frequently the ends, and in some cases, the tops of coffins are left exposed to view. It need hardly oc added, that these mounds of putrefaction, spread out upon the face of a rock to the
