had sent to the editor of the Herald the following laconic and very pugnacious epistle:

N. P. Willis to J. G. Bennett.

I notice in this day's Herald a scurrilous attack on me, and I now give you fair notice, that if you ever again allude to me, save in such manner as may be unobjectionable, I will cudgel you within an inch of your life. I have too long submitted to this unprovoked insolence, and have determined to put an end to it.

Yours, &c.,
N. P. WILLS.

To J. G. Bennett.

To this "for notice," Mr. Bennett replied, by saying and publishing, that he had "lived too long in the world, and encountered too may heroes of all kinds, to be much afraid of anything in the shape of man, woman, or devil."

Mr. Forrest and Mr. Willis are both considered, we believe, to be fighting men, and it may be, therefore, that this matter will yet be adjusted without exploding gunpowder, inasmuch as New York is on the side of the anti-duelling line The lawsuit is only a collateral proceeding, probably.—Wash. Globe.

A Picture of London as it is.

An English correspondent of the St. Louis Intelligencer, writes of this modern Babylon:

My first object, after I was snugly "fixed," as we say in America, was to make myself acquainted with the general outlines of the city, so that I should at all times know where I was, and how to go to any particular place. To this end, I walked and rode in all directions through the principel streets and places in the city—would go seven miles in this direction, and then seven miles in another—for, be it remembered that London is seven miles directly through, and twenty-four or five miles in circuit! and is intersected by eight thousand streets, lanes, alleys, &c !! The population is estimated in round numbers at one million and a half. The number of carriages, of various kinds, in daily demand to transport from place, the moving multitudes, is about four thousand. The number of those that travel in the little steamers, up and down the river, is immense. The number of vessels that annually enter the port of London, is thirteen thousand three hundred. The docks are numerous—the largest of which covers twenty acres, and the whole area occupied by docks, warehouses, &c., is nearly three hundred acres. This will give you some idea of the huge size of this immense Babylon.

I next paid attention to the magnificent buildings, public and private—such as the shurches, the "club-houses" which are, for the most part, very beautiful, the terraces (by which are meant the splendid mansions of the noble and wealthy) the "Royal Exchange," the 'Mansion House' (where the Lord Mayor of London resides,) the Bank of England and the Parliament House, &c. &c. This last edifice is not yet completed. It is said to be, whether truly or not I cannot say, the finest building in the world. It is Gothic in its external features, built on the margin of the river, presenting a grand front of nearly one thousand feet, decorated with a rich display of graceful mouldings, tracery and carvings, with innumerable heraldic devices, &c., carved from the solid rock of massive magnesian limestone, and covers an extent of nine acres of ground, with eleven open courts. It is surmounted with seven beautiful square towers, the most magnificent of which is called "Victoria Tower," and will be, when it is complete, nearly four hundred feet high. This superb palace, however, is far from being finished, and probably will not be, short of four years from the present date.

The Lawrence Divorce.

We cut the following excellent notice of the Lawrence Divorce case from the Miners Journal:

Considerable excitement has prevailed in fashionable society, upon the subject of the Lawrence Divorce. T. B. Lawrence the "hubby," is a son of the Hon. Abbot Lawrence, the celebrated millionaire of Boston, at present the American Minister at the Court of St. James. Mrs. Lawrence, previous to her marriage. was extensively known as 'the belle of the West.' Besides being very rich, she is said to have been one of the most beautiful ladies in this wide "worrald." She used to create an immense sensation in the polished circles of New Orleans, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Shortly after marriage, and upon taking up her residence with her husband in Boston, the Hon. Abbot Lawrence with the express view of introducing her into the fashionable society of that city, gave a magnificent, superb, unequalled and unapproachable soiree. Notwithstanding the entertainment was given expressly in her honor, she could hardly be persuaded to go, and when she did, finally consent, she surprised every body by appearing in a plain calico dress, without any ornament, trimmings or 'extras' whatever! The Hon. Abbot Lawrence, and all his family and friends, were mortified and confused!

She left Boston some months ago, on account of impaired health. and scarcely had she reached the house of her father, in Louisville, before an advertisement appeared in the newspapers, signed by her husband, "warning all persons not to trust his wife, Sallie, on his account, as whereas she had left his bed and board without any just cause, he was determined to pay no debts of her contracting!" This was very delicate—very polite—very loving!—particularly as Mrs. Lawrence has proved that she had never received a cent from her husband, and that all her debts were contracted in her own name, and liquidated with her own money. The divorce was granted without opposition, and the "belle of the West" is again free!

This case suggests points worthy of consideration. The parties, although rolling in wealth, flourishing in the seventh-heaven of upper tendom, and surrounded with all the luxuries of their high position were still all the time hopelessly, entirely excrutiatingly unhappy! We are of the opinion that mutual wealth is a fatal barrier to the happiness of domestic life.—And why? Because it destroys the chord of sympathy which links one to the other in mutual dependence, mutual deference, and mutual regard. Instead of Mr. Lawrence, Miss Ward should have married a poor gentleman. The proper mate for beauty is a man—not a money-purse.—Thus husbanded, her life might have been prolonged and happy. But as it is, we find her sinking away in consumption, and all her hopes nipped in the bud! It is clear

"She never told her leve,
But let concealment, like a worm in the bud,
Gnaw on damask cheek!"
