

POBTBY.

Song of the Electric Telegraph. BY E. L. BLANCHARD.

Away where the sunlight is bright'ning. Away where its last beams expire, I speed with the flash of the lightning. I fly on the wings of the wire! By me are earth's barrier riven,

By me are its boundaries spread; A word-and the impulse is given, A touch and the mission is sped!

Burrah! tis the best conjuration That Science, the wizard has done! Till all are united in one!

In silence I stealthily travel, Unscen, unread, and unheard: For not till my agents unravel My secret, is whispered a word. Through darkness and dayligut unheeding, Alike on my errand I go. To deep throbbing hearts ever spreading My tidings of gladness or wo.

Ere the voice of the echo had spoken-Ere thought could recoil from its birth-If the links of my path were unbroken, My flight would encompass the earth; From the bright star that gleams far above us and come back at half price. Flashed onward through measureless space, A welcome from voices that love us,

Oh! would that some kindred communion To man we could hope to impart, That a bond of such magical union Might link every heart unto heart! Not a tear that we now seek to smother Would then fall alone or uncared,

My own in a second would trace.

Not a joy, but the heart of another, Would thrill with the bliss that is shared. We need not, should Fate give denial,

Let sympathy touch but the dial, A cord shall be struck in return. No wish need be kept unimparted, Or lost as on selfishness thrown, But each from the heart as it darted Would find a response in our own. Oh! let love take the world and prepare it As swift to respond as receive;

This fanciful dream wholly sparn;

THE HIGHER LAW .- Edmund Burke, the great Irish orator upon one occasion, said: "Why are all born in subjection, all born equally, high and low. Governors FALL AND WINTER CLOTHING, and governed, in subjection to one great, immutable, pre-existent law, prior to all our devices, and prior to all our contrivances, paramount to our ideas, and all our Blanket Overcoats of all sizes; a large lot sensations, antecedent to our very existence, by which we are knit and connected in the eternal frame of the universe, out

Let us hear but of sorrow to share it.

And know but the want to relieve!

of which we cannot stir.

"This great law does not arise from our conventions or compacts; on the contrary, it gives to our conventions and compacts all the force and sanction they can have; it does not arise from our vain institutions. A NEW SLAVE STATE .- The Ft. Smith (Arkansas) Herald, says that the Cherokees, Chocktaws, Chickasaws, Creeks and Seminoles, own a large number of slave negroes. These Indian tribes that surrounded with States, and be hedged in with a dense white population. What will be the consequence!
