

Memorial to the Hon. Wm. R. King—His Acknowledgment.

The meeting of the Democracy of Washington city, to respond to the Baltimore nominations having adjourned about ten o'clock on Wednesday evening last, the greater portion of the vast assemblage, headed by Marsolletti's band, repaired to the residence of the Hon. William R. King. The band having played a beautiful air, Mr. King made his appearance, and was received by nine hearty cheers. He then addressed the assemblage as follows:

Fellow-citizens and Democrats: After the happy eloquent and forcible Democratic speeches you have heard this evening from the most distinguished men of our country, little remains for me to say, but simply to return you my sincere thanks for the respect you have manifested towards me. As regards myself, it pleased the Democratic Convention to select me as one of the standard-bearers of the Democracy. Whether that selection was a wise one or not, it remains for the Democracy to decide. For myself, I can only say that there were many others who would probably have been able to have borne the banner aloft with more vigor, and ability than myself. But, so far as my power extends, I shall ever sustain the principles of Democracy, whether I am in the ranks, or whether I am in command. [Loud cheers.]—You all know, fellow-citizens, that the names of many candidates were presented to the Baltimore Convention, any one of whom, so far as I know, the Democracy of the country would have been delighted to support and place in the highest position of honor. In the multiplicity of opinions, however, the nomination fell upon Franklin Pierce, of New Hampshire—a man against whom the tongue of calumny cannot utter a single breath that would taint his fair fame. [Loud cheers.] He has stood by the principles of Democracy from his youth upwards, and has never swerved from them. He has been true to his country, true to his party, true in all the relations of life, public and domestic civil and social. [Cheers.]

Such is the man who has been selected as our standard-bearer. Doubtless there are many others who would have been equally acceptable to the Democracy of our country; but one had to be selected, and Franklin Pierce is that man. [Cheers.] I understand, fellow-citizens, and I am rejoiced to hear it, that those gentlemen who have had many and devoted friends have come forward, and with the magnanimity that became them, have pledged themselves to exert every nerve in behalf of the man who has been nominated by their Democratic friends. To those men, permit me to say, all honor is due. The country will honor them; and the Democratic party will honor them; and in days to come they will be remembered in such a way as to show that their magnanimous conduct is prized and appreciated by the whole Democratic party of the country. [Great Cheering.] For myself, I am the humblest of the humble. If it should behoove the Democracy of the land to unite in placing me in the second office of the government, I shall discharge the duties that devolve on me—as I have ever endeavored to discharge every public trust—honestly, faithfully, and zealously, if not with ability. [Loud cheering.] To your city of Washington, fellow-citizens, I have only to say that my public acts speak for me, and show the estimation in which I have ever held the people of this District, and the disposition I have ever manifested to promote what I conceived to be their best interests and to contribute to the adorning and beautifying of your city, so as to make it a convenient and pleasant residence for all persons who may visit it, and thus render it more certain to continue the permanent seat of the national government. [Loud cheers.] From me you must not expect a speech. You have heard to-night, speeches that would do no discredit to the most eminent men that have lived in any age, and I could not hope, therefore, to entertain you for a moment. I again thank you for this manifestation of your respect.

The honorable gentleman then withdrew, amidst great cheering. The band again played several pieces, and the crowd adjourned, after many cheers to their respective homes.

The Golden Banner.

About the middle of April there was a large meeting of the Democracy of California, for the purpose of making arrangements to manufacture and transmit to the Democracy of this State the splendid Banner which they promised to us, in case we should give a greater proportionate majority for William Bigler than they would give for John Bigler. One gentleman has been appointed from each county to collect the necessary funds for purchasing the materials and making the Banner.—Pittsburg Union.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE AND HABITS OF GEN. PIERCE.

Every body, of course, is anxious to know something about the personale of the man who is to be our next President. He is not far from five feet seven inches in height, and finely proportioned. His face is impressive and commanding, and beaming all over with the light of intellect and energy. We have never seen a countenance which exhibits more lofty purpose, zeal and undisguised frankness. With a mind of the highest order, and harmoniously developed, as combines the suavity of a child. His habits are those of a man who believes there is a great deal to be done and very little time to do it in. He is forever at work, and we may safely say, that from the first time he entered public life, no man has spent his powers more profusely in carrying out what was allotted to him, than Gen. Pierce.

As an orator we will put him against any body in the country—but his arguments are none the less compact for the beauty of diction and the elegance of his gesture. In his love of a dozen lives to give they would be freely yielded up at her shrine. This salient features of his character he may have inherited from his father, who was a General in the Revolutionary war; and, we may add, was Governor of New Hampshire.—We delight in being thus particular, (though we have not said all what we shall say.)

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

'Ain't it wicked to rob dischicken roost Dick? 'Dat's a great moral question, Gumbo, we hain't time to argue it now; hand down another pullet.'

IMPORTANT LEGAL DECISION.—It has been decided in the Court of Common Pleas, of Philadelphia in the case of Wahn vs. O'Connor, that a tenant of a farm has no right to remove manure unless the agreement grants the right. In this case O'Connor, during the drought of last season, purchased hay, grain &c., to keep up his dairy, and claimed the manure made from the cattle, for the time they were thus fed, from produce not raised upon the farm. The Court decided against the tenant, because of the difficulty of determining the extent of right in such cases, in making a division between manures produced from food raised off or on the farm.

The New York Herald thus talks of Gen Pierce: "Gen. Pierce will be found to be by no means a weak candidate. The State of New Hampshire is perfectly crazy with exultation. In Concord, the capital, as soon as they heard the news of his nomination, men, women, and children rushed out in the street, 280 guns were fired as a feu de joie, and all the bells were tolled for hours. Some of Gen. Scott's friends ran up the street, shouting, 'Is there any fire anywhere?'—'Is there a fire anywhere?' 'Yes, there is a fire,' responded a young Democrat, 'a devil of a fire in the rear.'"

A down east editor has got such a cold, in his head that the water freezes on his face when he undertakes to wash.—EXCHANGE.

If he could call on Peter Pump and get a bottle of MEXX'S excellent Syrup, his face would soon have assumed its natural appearance.

Fossil Remains.—The Texas Lone Star says that a tusk and a portion of the leg bone of a large animal was recently discovered embedded in the sand at the Hidalgo Falls. They were taken up and carried to Washington. The tusk is ten feet long, and measures at the greatest circumference twenty three inches. In taking up it was unfortunately broken. The tusk and the other bones are in a state of petrification.
