land her passengers and mails, and at the same time the authorities issued an order to the effect that this privilege would not be allowed again if Purser Smith should be on board. Captain Davenport replied in writing that the vessel would return with Smith on board, and that if she was molested, the Spanish authorities must take the responsibility. The vessel sails from New York in a few days and upon reaching Havana a rupture is likely to take place, should the offensive Mr. Smith be on board, and it is said he will.

He is hers of the House of Representatives are daily becoming ouite notorious and bids fair to make his mark upon the age. No doubt "higher honors" are in store for this member of the renowned Smith family, who has so far caused so much confusion between the " Queen of the Antilles ' and the United States. A monument should forthwith be built to commemorate his "deeds of dreadful note," and be the means of handing down his name for the admiration of future generations. He may, however, he "a man more sinn'd against than sinning." The Cuban authorities charge him with conveying information regarding the revolutionary movements upon the island to the "Filibusteros" in the United States, and with being the means of communication between the disaffected on the island and their cooperators in New York and New Orleans. The Spanish officials may be over-punctilious, and Mr. Smith, may, as he states, have committed no offence. They believe that he has, and havetherefore, the right to forbid his landing, but none, we believe, to prevent the landing of the mails and passengers because one obnoxious person is on board the ship. This the authorities did do recently, and it is for this, and not for the treatment Smith received, that we condemu them. Mr. Smith acts no doubt, under instructions from the owners of the vessel.
