

From the Philadelphia Ledger.
The Southwark Tragedy—Complete Developments—Terrible Scene.

The scene that transpired yesterday afternoon in the court room at the county prison, has scarcely a parallel in the annals of crime. Arthur Spring, accused of the murder of Hannah Shaw and Ellen Lynch, was brought before Alderman Israel, and the examination proceeded with under direction of Attorney General Reel. Joseph Doran, Esq., appeared for the accused, and Aaron Thompson, Esq., for the younger Spring, who it was known the father would attempt to criminate, as being the actual murderer, in connection with a youth named Finney.

Arthur Spring, the accused, is about forty-five years of age, a native of Ireland, having come from the same parish in the county Kerry, with the unfortunate woman who fell victims to his lust for gold. He is stout built, the traces of bad passions and a dissolute life in his features appear older than he really is. He sat unmoved during the examination of the witnesses, his countenance at times wearing a smile.

After the examination of various witnesses, including Mr. Maguire and family, keeping the tavern at which Spring and his son were boarding, and a clerk at the clothing store in Market street, where the son purchased some shirts for his father with one of the stolen gold pieces, the son was placed on the stand as a witness in the case.

This youth, whose name is also Arthur Spring, is a fair complexioned, intelligent looking lad, of about seventeen, and the feeling he exhibited under the peculiar circumstances in which he was placed, commended him to the sympathy of all who witnessed the trying scene. He took the oath in an impressive manner, and replied to all the questions of the Attorney General with a modest earnestness and evident sincerity. He was deeply affected when pressed by questions bearing upon the guilt of his father, and at one time had to be led to the open air to keep him from fainting. The statement he made was in substance as follows:

The father and son had been living for about four weeks at the house of Patrick Maguire, in Market street. On Tuesday night last, the father took the son to Carroll's house, the former carrying with him a piece of lead pipe, from Maguire's—the son accompanying him, as he says, in order to prevent him from committing violence, having some suspicion that he intended to rob, if he got a chance.

On arriving at Carroll's, the boy was introduced to the females, and Mrs. Shaw took him to her lap, telling him that she had nursed him when a little boy and kissing him several times. While there the fight occurred, and John W. Carroll gave the elder Spring a blow in the eye, which he still displays. The son says his father attempted to strike Carroll with the lead pipe but that it fell from his hand, and the son picked it up and secreted it about his person. They then left the house and returned home, the father telling him there were two more there to get the money. The next day his father went again to the house to get his own hat, which he left behind him, and afterwards he told his son that Carroll and his wife were both going to a party the next night and there would be nobody in the house but Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Lynch.

His father had learned the previous night that Mr. Lynch had been discharged from the Navy Yard and received his pay. On Thursday evening young Spring saw his father in their room about eight o'clock, when he went to tell him he was going out on an errand for Mrs. Maguire. His father then had his coat off, and he thought he was going to bed. The son went on the stairs, and afterwards to certain comrades in Morgan's court, Thirteenth street, one of whom was a boy younger than himself, named Quinn.

After returning home at about a quarter of eleven o'clock, he opened the back door, on hearing a rapping, and saw his father with his shoes in his hand. He came in, and gave his son a number of twenty and ten dollar gold pieces, telling him to put them away. He then told his son that he had murdered those two women, and had taken the money from Mrs. Lynch's trunk.

In answer to his son's inquiries, the father told him that he was let in by Mrs. Shaw who opened the back door for him; that a man and a girl were in the house, but he kept quiet until they had gone. He then talked and drank with Mrs. Shaw, and at last he got her to go upstairs, and see if her sister was asleep. She went again and told him that she was, and soon after he commenced his murderous assault upon her. Before she was entirely dead, Mrs. Lynch was aroused by the struggles of her sister, and came down stairs in her night clothes. He attacked her, and had a most violent struggle before he succeeded in quieting her. She crept behind or beneath the settee, in the back room, and seeing it to be dead, he went up stairs in his stocking feet, but he was discovered by her. She then found that he had revived. He again attacked her with the dirk, and finished her, by, as he said, twisting her neck. He then went up stairs, and broke the dirk in forcing open the lock of the trunk. He then set fire to the house stating that he burned the ends of his fingers in kindling it. When his son suggested that the knife would lead to his detection, he said he had thrown away the dirk in George street.

The next morning he went to the court house, and gave the gold pieces to whom it was given by a youth at the time he was living in Washington, and was taken from him by his father about two weeks since. He had borrowed it before, but returned it. The boy identified the sheath of the dirk, and also the piece of lead pipe.

After going to their room, the son brought water, and the father washed out the stains of blood from his shirt. The son returned the dirk to his father; but the next morning he was sent with ten dollar gold piece to purchase a coat for his father. He bought two of large size for his father, one for himself, and a pair of stockings, and out of the change, $5 was paid to Mrs. Maguire for their board, which was the only money paid upon that account.

On the cross-examination, Judge Doran, after putting searching questions to test the correctness of his previous testimony, without producing the slightest variance, asked the witness in the most solemn manner whether he had not himself committed the murders, assisted by Quinn, his associate. A most emphatic denial was returned, and other questions followed in the same spirit, prompted by the father, but nothing was gained for the prisoner. The witness asserted his innocence in the most solemn and impressive manner. The last question asked was whether he was not promised, if he testified for the prosecution, that he should be liberated, but he denied this, and said the statement was made voluntarily. He burst into tears as he declared that he would rather have met his death than could he have been spared his present disgrace.

At this point Mr. Reel interfered, as he had done several times previously, and resting the prosecution on what testimony had been submitted, the prisoner was remanded for trial. The witnesses were notified to attend this morning before the Grand Jury, who will act at once upon the case, and the trial will probably take place early next week.

Spring has, during his residence in this and New York City, been frequently before the Courts on criminal charges. He was, many years since, tried in this city for obtaining a check of liquor under false pretences, and served a short term of imprisonment. At one time, he kept a confectionary store in Market street, above Thirteenth, in one of the old shanties recently demolished to give place to the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot. Afterwards he removed to New York, and was there accused of robbing a man of $800; but this case never reached trial, he having compromised with the loser, by restoring a portion of the plunder. In 1845 he was sentenced to eight years imprisonment in Sing Sing, for burglary in Center street, after serving seven years, his son, who was working at Washington, obtained signatures of influential persons there to a petition to Governor Young, for the pardon of his father, and by personally presenting it at Albany, he succeeded in obtaining his object.

He was liberated on the 22d of October, 1852, and came to this city with his son about Christmas last. They were employed for a time at Mc Ragan's, a confectioner, in Market street, but for the last month have been idle. A report has prevailed that Spring was tried for the murder of his wife in New York. This is, however, believed to be an error. He was known to treat his wife with great brutality, and the marks of violence upon her person when she died, led to a supposition that she had been foully dealt with, but it is said this charge never came to a trial.

Lynch, the husband, widowed by this foul murder, was present at the hearing, and was deeply agitated while listening to the details of the crime as supplied by the younger Spring.—At the conclusion of the hearing, Lynch shook the witness by the hand, and expressed himself satisfied of his innocence.

Lynch during yesterday, saw his orphaned children for the first time since his return to the city, and deeply affecting was the interview.—The children are thriving finely under the motherly care of Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Quinn, living on Patsyank road, above Federal street. A deep interest has been taken in the welfare of these infants, and the probability is that they will be adopted into families who are both able and willing to do a good part by them.

The bodies of the murdered females were privately interred yesterday, at the Cathedral Cemetery, west of the Schuylkill, in a lot owned by Lynch. The first husband of Mrs. Shaw alluded to above, having been buried there at the expense of Mr. Lynch.

In addition to the evidence at the hearing yesterday, is the fact that the wounds inflicted upon the deceased were left-handed blows, and that the prisoner, for the last twenty years, has been noted for that peculiarity. The damning fact may also be mentioned that the fingers of the prisoner still show the marks of the burns received, according to his own account, while setting fire to the house.

The developments of yesterday, our readers will no doubt readily admit, are most convincing with regard to the guilt of the prisoner; and amid the congratulations at the prospect of the violated law being speedily avenged, the promptitude and vigilance of the Southwark police in securing the guilty man should be properly appreciated, and the credit awarded which is so justly their due.

The Liquor Bill.
The liquor bill pending before the Pa. House of Representatives, provides as follows:—

Sec. 1. No person, except such as may be appointed for the purpose under this act, shall manufacture or sell any spirituous vinous or malt liquors; and that all moneys paid for liquor in violation of this act, can be recovered back, and when labor is given for such liquors, the wages thereof may be recovered in like manner.

Sec. 2. Makes provisions for the appointment by the Courts of Quarter Sessions, for one person in each township, ward or borough, to sell wines and other liquors for sacramental, medical, mechanical, and artificial purposes.

Sec. 3. Each person so appointed shall keep an account in writing of the liquor bought, manufactured and sold by him, stating the name, residence, and occupation of each individual, and uses for which the liquor has been sold.

Sec. 4. Provides for removing an agent in case he violates this law, and for the appointment of a successor.

Sec. 5. A violation of this act shall be punished, the first offence by a fine of $50, the second, $100—and every subsequent offence $200, and imprisonment not less than two, or more than six months.

Sec. 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, relate to the duties of officers, seizure of liquor and the manner of proceeding.

Secs. 11 and 12 fix the 23d of February, 1853, as the time when the law shall take effect, and provides for submitting it to a vote of the people at the next general election in October, 1853.

The Double Murder Trial.
The trial of Arthur Spring, for the murder of the two sisters, in Southwark, was commenced Monday morning, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer Philadelphia, before Judges Allison and Kelley. The most intense excitement prevailed, and an immense crowd assembled in and about the Court-house. The keenest curiosity was felt to get a glimpse at the murderer. He is a large, stout man, with small eyes, and by no means bad looking. He was smuggled into the court room, by a device of the police-officers, one of whom counterfeited Spring, and took his place in the ordinary prison van, while the real murderer was taken up, somewhat in advance in a hack. When the bill of indictment was read, he listened attentively, and answered "Not guilty." Joseph M. Doran, Esq., officiates as his counsel, while the prosecution is conducted by Messrs. W. B. Reed and W. B. Mann. The opening address of the District Attorney, Mr. Reed, was eloquent, able, and impressive.

The late Texas news states that it is a baleful fact, and worthy of consideration, that the Indians of Texas are now in almost a starving condition. Wild game, which affords their only means of subsistence, has disappeared; and they are reduced to the necessity of eating their horses or starving. Persons who have recently traveled through their country, say that whole days may be passed without meeting with game of any description; and the Indians, feeling the neglect of the government towards them, and impelled by hunger, are of necessity bound to pass the bounds prescribed by the Government. Hence the recent incursions into the settlements, and the necessity of the late call of the Governor of the State for the companies of rangers which have just been discharged.

A little boy, upon whom his mother was inflicting personal chastisement, said—"Give me two or three kicks more, mother, I don't think I can behave well yet."

Valuable Property for Sale in the town of Jefferson, Cambria co., Penna.
THE town of Jefferson possesses advantages far over any other in the county, and its situation offers inducements for the investment of money in lands and houses. Jefferson is situate on the line of the Pennsylvania and Portage Railroads, within twelve hours travel of Philadelphia, and four hours of Pittsburgh, at the terminus of the Jefferson and Ebensburg Plank Road, in the center of a good agricultural region. Bituminous coal is plenty and cheap. The Conemaugh which skirts the town, is capable of affording sufficient water-power, at all seasons of the year, for manufacturing purposes. It is contemplated to connect Bedford Springs with Jefferson by a Plank Road, the distance being but 24 miles. Property must rapidly increase in value.

The subscriber will sell eight Building Lots, adjoining the Catholic Church, on the road leading to Munster. Also, eight lots fronting on the Plank Road, near the center of the town.

Also, three valuable lots on Main street, on which there are houses erected.

It is unnecessary to further describe the property as those desirous of purchasing will call with or write to the subscriber in Jefferson, who will give every necessary information. A good title given clear of any incumbrance. The terms of sale will be made easy to the purchaser. Apply to HUGH DUGAN, Jefferson, February 24, 1853—13-5.

Notice.
In consequence of having sold our Furnaces to the Cambria Iron Company, the Partnership heretofore existing under the firm of P. Shoenerberger & Co., at Mill Creek Furnace, and also the Partnership existing under the firm of King & Shoenerberger at Cambria Furnace, are both dissolved. The business will be settled by either of the Parties, or the managers at the furnaces, who are authorized to use the names of the respective firms in settling up business.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Hardware.
Would respectfully call the attention of Merchants and buyers generally to the largest assortment of Hardware ever offered in the western market. Having enlarged our store and made extensive additions to our former stock, we are enabled to compare with any other establishment in the Union.

The late addition to our firm, will enable Mr. C. H. W. to devote his entire attention to purchasing—adding a portion of his time in Europe taking every advantage of fluctuations of buying exclusively for cash.

Among our assortment may be found the following, viz:
6000 dozen knives and forks,
8000 " pen and pocket knives,
2000 " razors,
24000 " knod, chest and nail locks,
10000 " put locks and latches,
600 gro. ten and table saws,
100 dozen hand and panel saws,
500 mill and cross cut saws,
3000 pr trail chains ass'd,
300 dozen halter chains,
2400 " gun locks,
42 cases plains ass'd,
1000 dozen chisels and plain irons,
2500 " files and rasps,
500 " axes ass'd brands,
2500 " hinges,
750 " grass and corn scythes,
300 " shovels and spades,
250 " hay and manure forks,

Gun trimming, bellows, anvils, vices, &c. &c. Knowing our superior facilities for procuring goods gives us advantage over others in the trade, we would earnestly solicit an examination of our stock before purchasing and especially from merchants passing through our city eastward.

We would also inform saddlers and dealers in saddle hardware, that we have fitted up a sale room exclusively for that branch of trade and hope in a large and well selected stock at low prices to secure their favors.
