The Cunard steamship Asia reached her berth at six o'clock, this evening, bringing Liverpool...

The Washington arrived off Cowes on the morning of the 12th.

The ship was leaking, but the cargo was dry.

The Asia saw the steamer America on the 13th inst., and the Africa on the 24th.

The British mail steamship Oranoco had arrived, bringing news from South America, to January 29th, and by the Forerunner, from Africa, dates were received to Feb. 14th.

The Lombardy emigrants in Piedmont, affected by the sequestrati in going on in Lombardy, have applied to the Piedmontese Government for protection. The Ministry have accordingly resolved to protest against the confiscation, and to forward a remonstrance to the Court of Vienna, giving notice of the fact to London and Paris.

THE LATEST—BY TELEGRAPH.

PARIS, Friday, March 11.

A report has been received from Naples, under date of the 7th, of an attempt having been made upon the life of King Ferdinand of Naples.

The Journal Italia Pupula states that a gun was fired at Kein, the charge from which took effect in his leg, inflicting a serious wound, which the surgeons are fearful that amputation will be necessary.

The London Daily News thinks this report requires confirmation, but asserts that there had been several collisions between the people and the soldiers of the Swiss regiments at Naples, in which many lives were lost.

Origin of Mules in the United States.

Mr. George Washington P. Custis, in his last paper, under the title of Recollections and Private Memorials of the Life and Character of Washington, gives the following account of the introduction of mules into this country, which will be found very interesting:

Upon Washington's first retirement in 1793, he became convinced of the defective nature of the working animals employed in the agriculture of the Southern States, and set about remedying the evil by the introduction of mules instead of horses, the mule being found to live longer, be less liable to diseases, require less food, and in every respect to be more serviceable and economical than the horse in the agricultural labor of the Southern States.

Up to 1783 scarcely any mules were to be found in the American Confederation; a few had been imported from the West Indies, but they were of diminutive size and of little value. So soon as the views on this subject of the illustrious farmer of Mount Vernon were known abroad, he received a present from the King of Spain of a Jack and two Jennies, selected from the royal studs at Madrid.

The Jack, called the Royal Gitt, was sixteen hands high, of a grey color, heavily made, and of a splendid disposition.

At the same time, the Marquis de Lafayette sent out a Jack and Jennies from the Island of Malta; this Jack, called the Knight of Malta, was a superb animal, black color, with the form of a stag and the ferocity of a tiger.

Washington availed himself of the best qualities of the two Jacks by crossing the breeds, and hence obtained a favorite Jack, called Compound, which animal united the size and strength of the Gitt with the high carriage and activity of the Knight.

The Jacks arrived at Mount Vernon, if we mistake not, early in 1788. The General bred some very superior mules from his coach mares, sending them from Philadelphia for the purpose.

In a few years the estate of Mount Vernon became stocked with mules of a superior order, rising to the height of sixteen hands, and of great power and usefulness, and a team of four mules selling, at the sale of the General's effects, for eight hundred dollars.

In no portion of Washington's various labors and improvements in agriculture, was he so particularly entitled to be hailed as a public benefactor, as in the introduction of mules in farming labor, those animals being at this time almost exclusively used for farming purposes in the Southern States.

Qualification of Vice President King.

A letter from Matanzas, published in the New Orleans Picayune, gives an account of the swearing in of the Vice President of the United States, from which we extract the following:

"For the first time in the history of the Republic, has the man chosen by the people for the second post of honor, taken the oath of office in a foreign land. William Rufus King was, on the 4th instant, sworn in as Vice President of the United States, at the Cumbe, near Matanzas.

The day was a most beautiful one; the clear blue sky of the tropics over our heads, the general aspect of Cuba beneath our feet, and the delicious sea-breezes of these latitudes sprinkling its coolness over all us.

Early in the morning, Consul Rodney, deputed by Judge Sharkey to administer the oath, left town on horseback for the Cumbe, accompanied by several American gentlemen. A pleasant ride of three miles brought us to the estate where Mr. King was residing, called La Cumbe, (the peak,) from its situation on the culminating point of the hills that immediately surround Matanzas.

"The oath was administered by Consul Rodney to the Vice President, who was ready and waiting our arrival. The volume was brought up to the door, and Mr. King stepped into it, in order to ride into Matanzas before the sun should be too high to make it pleasant. The whole cavalcade, consisting of some twelve or fifteen American gentlemen, immediately mounting and forming an escort around the carriage, accompanied the Vice President to town.

Mr. King left Matanzas on the same day for the estate of Mr. Chartram, in the partido of Limonar, about eighteen miles from Matanzas. His health is very poor, and no one accustomed to see patients with pulmonary disease in this climate, but he knows he cannot survive very long. He may live for months in this mild climate, but he can never be better. The old statesman views his coming fate with calmness, as one who has fought the good fight and will lay hold of eternal life."

Whig State Convention.

The Whig State Convention assembled at Lancaster, Pa., on the 24th, to nominate candidates for Canal Commissioner, Auditor General and Surveyor General. We received no account of the proceedings by telegraph, as we presume going notice of the fact to London and Paris.
