FOR GOVERNOR, WILLIAM BIGLER.

[Subject to the decision of the Democratic Convention.]

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

- SUPREME JUDGE, JOHN C. KNOX. CANAL COMMISSIONER, THOMAS H. FORTYTH. AUDITOR GENERAL, EPHRAIM BANKS. SURVEYOR GENERAL, J. PORTER BRAWLEY. FOR SENATOR, JOHN CRESSWELL, Jr. FOR ASSEMBLY, THOMAS COLLINS, WM. T. DAUGHERTY. FOR TREASURER, ANDREW J. RHEY. FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY, T. L. HEYER. FOR COMMISSIONER, JOHN H. DOUGLASS. FOR COUNTY SURVEYOR, THOMAS MCCONNELL. FOR AUDITOR, JOSEPH HOGE.

AROUSE! DEMOCRATS, AROUSE!

In one more week, Democrats, the election will be here. Are you prepared for it? Can you hail the first dawn of the 11th day of October with the thought that that day you will devote to your party and your cause? Can you watch its twilight dawning with the proud satisfaction of knowing that your duty has been manfully, zealously, honestly performed?

The issues presented for your decision this fall are important. Here, in Cambria, the county whose politicians are more abused and more feared by their opponents than any others in the State, a hard political battle is to be fought. Already the toxin has been sounded, and Whiggery is rallying its myriads under a banner bearing for a motto "THE UNCONDITIONAL SALE OF THE PUBLIC WORKS."

Men of Cambria! You have toiled harder than any others in the State to build a Rail Road over the Alleghenies, and dig a Canal from the swamping Ohio to the silvery Schuylkill. Year after year you have paid taxes to construct these gigantic public improvements, and now when they are putting revenue into your treasury—when their advantages are being felt by every farmer, mechanic, and laboring man in the county, you have them pass into the hands of a soulless corporation, which would use them only for its advantage and your injury?

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP. This glorious old township will not go the WHOLE TICKET this fall, but will fight for Democracy there, are men who have, time and again, come to the rescue when the political horizon was dark and lowering. They have rolled up their soul-stirring majority of 400, when that majority cast terror in the ranks of their opponents, and filled the hearts of their friends with joy.

THOMAS COLLINS, ESQ. A cry has been raised in this county that Mr. COLLINS will favor the repeal of the "Three Mill Tax" on tonnage on the Central Rail Road, but Democrats should not be induced to oppose him by any such mis-statement. The Convention which nominated Mr. COLLINS passed a resolution instructing him, if elected, to oppose this measure, and he considers himself bound by these instructions.

GET OUT THE VOTES. Democrats, get out every voter this fall. See that every man who will vote the Democratic ticket is at the polls, and deposits his ballot. A more important election than that which is approaching was never held in this county, and no effort should be spared to insure the triumph of our party.

John Cresswell, Esq. This gentleman is gaining strength every day, and unless we are much mistaken in the signs of the times, his majority in Cambria county will be very large. His consistent Democracy has attached every member of that party to him, and his natural uprightness has made him hosts of friends among the opposition. From every part of the District, we hear intelligence of the most cheering kind, and friends are flocking to his support by scores.

More Ruin! Witness the evidences of the "Ruin" brought about by the Tariff of '35, that "raw head and bloody bones" which Whiggery has used to frighten the people into voting for her hollow-hearted and corrupt politicians. The following paragraph is copied from a Whig paper printed in Danville, Va. Improvements are still rapidly going on in our flourishing borough. The Montour Iron Company have erected this season, or are erecting, about one hundred new dwelling houses; and West Hill, a mere suburb of Danville, contains, at this time, nearly as many inhabitants as the whole town did ten years ago.

State Fair. The State Fair, at present being held in Pittsburg, is said to be the finest exhibition of the kind ever witnessed in the United States. Quite a number of our citizens have been and are now in attendance at it. It is time, we think, that something should be done towards establishing an Agricultural or Horticultural Society in Cambria county. Many of our citizens are deeply interested in agricultural pursuits, and many more are successful experimental horticulturalists. An exhibition could be gotten up here that would be honorable to our county and interesting to visitors.

Col. John Cresswell. A trip to the country, last week, and our daily intercourse with men from nearly every part of the county, convinces us that our candidate for Senator will run the full party vote, and that will be considerably of an increase over that which he polled last fall. The great dissatisfaction (such as Whigs always see after a Democratic nomination) appears to have all "resolved itself into a thin dew," and nothing more can be seen or heard of it.

Cresswell got his nomination honestly—he did not buy his friends—hence, if elected, there is little danger that he will sell them. Those who felt grieved because the nominee was not their choice, soon saw the absolute folly of grieving over what could not be helped. They saw too that the nomination of Mr. C. was the result of a compromise; and "the sober second thought" revealed the fact that Mr. Cresswell has always been a firm and unflinching Democrat—has never sought office, but is eminently qualified to fill any office to which he may aspire. These things duly weighed, and a determination of all true Democrats to how to the will of the majority has made all right, and we now declare to our brethren in the other counties of the district that no dissension exists in Blair County among the Democrats—Cresswell will poll the full party vote—and a little over.—Hollidaysburg Standard.

MR. TRAGH. Dear Sir:—Permit me to say that White stock is at a tremendous discount in this county. I have been through a number of townships lately, and I do assure you that he cannot begin to get half the Whig vote of the county. The dissatisfaction among the faithful is so glaring that no effort is made to hide it. An edition of the "Blair County Whip" (the check roll-slavers particular organ) got up especially for this county, and filled with choice articles from the pen of "my cousin," has been scattered everywhere, but has only served as an extra brand thrown among the disaffected. I will not tell you of the use made of the few of them that were lifted, but they were not read, and I know of at least two Post offices from which large bundles were returned to Hollidaysburg. I understand that the friends of White calculated largely on getting Democratic votes along the Rail Road, on the plea that White has some times voted the Democratic ticket. But rest easy on that score—the frosty sons of thunder can not be gulled, and let me assure you that Cresswell is bound to receive the full party vote, which we have reason to believe will this fall foot up a cool thousand majority.

Governor Stevens's Expedition. Letters from the exploring party of Governor Stevens, dated at Fort Union, on the mouth of the Yellow Stone River, August 24, have been received at St. Paul, and are published in the Minnesota Democrat. It appears that the train has passed over seven hundred and twenty-five miles of the proposed northern route for the Pacific Rail Road, and that the results of the expedition thus far have been that the Indians are peaceable and the whole party, men and animals, are in excellent working condition.

Change in Canal Appointments. As a matter of general information we publish the subjoined resolution, recently adopted by the Board of Canal Commissioners. The reasons for making this change in the time of making appointments to office on the public works is, we understand, founded on the obvious necessity of making the term of service of receiving and disbursing officers correspond with the fiscal year. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14, 1853. Resolved, That in pursuance of a resolution passed the 10th day of December, 1852, the Board will, on Tuesday, the first day of November next, proceed to consider applications for, and to make appointments to, the various offices on those canals and railroads of the Commonwealth for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1854.—Extract from the Journal of the Board of Canal Commissioners.

THOMAS L. WILSON, Secretary.

NEWS AND MISCELLANY.

Up, strike, ye sons of Cambria free, for Cresswell and Democracy. Be early at the ballot-box, and give your vote for John C. Knox. You'll gain your country's heartfelt thanks, by electing Brawley, Forsyth and Banks.

Over 4,000,000 feet of Lumber was cleared at Williamsport, Lycoming county, during the month of August last. A wit, who had not the fear of "modern reformers" before his eyes, thus poetizes them: "They are willing to go it tolerable strong. Against in the abstract, for that kind of wrong, is always unpopular."

When an extravagant friend wishes to borrow your money, consider which of the two you would rather lose. D. T. Woodward, convicted of the murder of his wife, was hanged in Washington city, on last Friday. It will gratify many to learn, that the home of Henry Clay, Ashland, is to remain the property of his descendants. It was purchased by his son, James Barton Clay, for $17,150.

Mr. Kingsbury, of Ind., a blind man, recently injured by an accident on the Michigan and Southern Railroads, brought suit against the company for $10,000 damages, which they promptly paid without litigation. George H. being informed that an important printer was to be published for having published a superior king's speech, replied: "I hope the man's punishment will be of the mildest sort, because I have read both, and so far as I understand either of them, I like the squamous speech better than my own."

A young lady who married a rich man under pretence of being beautiful, is discovered to have painted, worn bustles, and otherwise disguised her real natural imperfections. Her husband means to sue her for obtaining money under false pretences. John Y. Mason of Va., has received the French Mission after a long delay. It was generally expected that John A. Dix of N. Y. would receive the appointment, but mother is the lucky man. Mr. Mason has the advantage of much experience and will make a good representative at the Court of St. Cloud.

The lengthy prosecution against Bishop Deane has been brought to a sudden close. He confessed in part and the prosecutors withdrew the remainder of the charges. Thus it is that the ministers of God, resort to compromises when tired of contention, as well as politicians. We ask the attention of our readers to the advertisements of the Messrs. Ivory, which will be found in this paper. These gentlemen are ever ready to accommodate the public, and deserve the patronage of the same.

Quite a number of counterfeiters have recently been arrested in Ohio and a large amount of counterfeit money recovered. The gang was engaged in counterfeiting the notes of the State Bank of Ohio. The report that Joaquin, the California robber, had been captured and beheaded, is contradicted. A young man from Santa Fe, bearing a strong resemblance to the robber, was killed in mistake for him. The yellow fever is rapidly declining in the South. In the Eastern cities it has made its appearance, and a number of deaths are reported.

Beverly Tucker has established a new paper, in Washington, D. C., called the Sentinel. It is Democratic, and warmly sustains President Pierce's Administration. Col. Fremont has been compelled to give up his survey of a route for the Pacific Rail Road on account of his health, which is very feeble. Gen. James Keenan will start for Hong Kong, China, to which port he has been appointed Consul, before long. He will take with him the best wishes of hosts of friends.

The Commissioners of Lawrence county, on the 26th inst., made a subscription of $200,000 to the North Western Railroad. The Mayor's Journal, of Tottenville, the former organ of the Whig party in Schuylkill county, has bolted the nominations, and will support the Maine Law candidates. A United States Senator is to be elected in Tennessee by the Legislature just chosen. Mr. Bell's seat is to be filled. We do not see announcement that he declines a re-election, but the Knoxville Register urges that Gustavus A. Henry, the best and candidate for Governor, be chosen.

Biographical Sketches of the Princess and Rev. Dr. Gallitzin.

We publish below an article which will deeply interest most of our readers. No name is mentioned in Cambria county with greater veneration than that of Dr. GALLITZIN; and who that venerated the son, could fail to reverence and love the memory of the mother?

Mr. Emmon—I send you for publication, in your valuable journal, two interesting biographical notices, translated from the Church History of Abbe Biorbacher; one of Princess de Gallitzin, and the other, of her illustrious son, Rev. Demetrius Augustine Gallitzin, so dear to us all, the renowned Missionary and glory of the Church in Western Pennsylvania, now the flourishing Diocese of Pittsburgh. Whatever details can be collected, throwing light on the history of this holy Priest, who labored for nearly half a century in planting and propagating the Church in the Allegheny region and surrounding districts, will be read with no ordinary interest. Who does not wish even to know something of the mother of so distinguished a son?

In the latter quarter of the eighteenth century, (1788,) the centre of Catholic attraction in Germany was the city of Munster, in Westphalia. There the world admired the piety of a Russian lady, converted to Catholicism, viz., the Princess Gallitzin, born Countess Amelia Schmettau. Placed at a boarding school in Aresbau, at a very early age, she left it about eight or nine years afterwards, with some knowledge of music; but, as for anything else, she was so ill-instructed, as to be unable to read and write. Moreover, she was so ungracious in her appearance at her debut society, that her mother sent her to a boarding school in Berlin, kept by a certain French Abbe, named Prelmonat. She remained there eighteen months, not to improve herself in reading and writing, but to learn to dance, to speak French, and to know a little Mythology. Under the direction of such a guide, who himself was a pupil of Lamotrie's school, she necessarily lost all ideas of religion, which had been instilled into her before.

Being now restored to the bosom of her parents, and mixing freely in the gay world, she became disgusted with the course and frivolity inseparable from such a life, and withal she felt great mortification on perceiving her deficiencies, when compared with other ladies of quality, who could speak on all subjects with a certain air of confidence and mental acumen. She became firmly resolved to acquire this talent by going through a course of private reading. Placing herself under no restraint as to choice of books, she abandoned herself to an indiscriminate perusal of all that fell in her way. Through these books were generally romances, and though she read them with avidity, still this kind of reading had no other effect upon her than to fill her with a love of solitude, which she divided between reading and music. By degrees, a certain remembrance of her first early religious impressions made her revive in mind her moral condition, and, by further reflection, she was led to conceive a great fear of hell and eternity. The necessity of securing and quieting herself on this score, awakened within her that disposition for inquiry which, in the course of her life, and which, finally, after many wanderings in the barren paths of natural wisdom, conducted her at last to the gate of heavenly truth. A profound sentiment of the moral dignity of man, as well as of the importance of the eternal distinction between good and evil, revived in her. Such were the results of reflection in a young lady fifteen years of age!

Nevertheless, she did not escape the contagion, which from England and France, through the frivolous writings of a Voltaire, a Helvidius, and a Diderot, spread incredulity, materialism and libertinism among the nobility and Courts of Europe. The Princess, guided by her noble feelings, but still a stranger to all positive religion, tried, by mere reason, to convince herself of the truth of the existence of God, and in the immortality of the soul. Even after her marriage with Prince De Gallitzin, in 1808, she continued with an ardor, ever increasing, to give herself up to meditation on the end of her creation, and similar subjects. Her husband, Dr. Gallitzin, was an enthusiastic admirer of Voltaire and Diderot. Whenever the Princess accompanied him, she met with nothing but examples of the greatest immorality and corruption. This sad experience determined her, in the beginning of the year 1770, to abandon altogether the world and its commerce, to devote herself exclusively to the education of her children. Mary Ann, born 1769, and Demetrius, (the future American Missionary,) born 1771. She moreover wished, by private study, to make up for the deficiencies of her own education.

After having spent many years in Holland, where her husband was Russian Ambassador, she established her residence at Munster, in Westphalia, in 1779. It was here she became acquainted with M. De Furstenberg, whose efforts and knowledge displayed in the cause of education, had gained him a great name. He was Vice-General and Prime Minister to the Prince-Bishop of Munster.

Yet a long time did the Princess continue to consider self-love and egotism as a sufficient foundation for moral conduct; and after these principles did she labor to train up her children to virtue. After the lapse of a certain period, she began to feel the insufficiency of these principles, and to regret that, through want of faith, she was so long without perceiving that religion. In the year 1788 the merciful hand of the Lord sent her a grievous sickness. Finding that she grew more thoughtful and serious on her sick bed, Baron Furstenberg sent his confessor to hold up to her the belief in the Saviour and the success of the Church. As her convictions were yet incomplete, she excused herself for not immediately complying with these overtures. Nevertheless, she gave De Furstenberg an answer, which consoled her much; having promised that if God would prolong her life, she would make the Christian religion her serious study. She got well, and kept her word. Towards the end of August, 1786, she came over to the Faith and the Church. Profoundly convinced, by her reflections, of human weakness, and vividly penetrated with the insufficiency of her own strength, she spent the remainder of her days in prayer, in struggles against her own will, and in bitter regret for the past, self-denial, the deepest humility, and renunciation of her own will, became her daily exercise. Under the direction of Furstenberg, and specially of his wise confessor, Overberg, she made rapid advances in the paths of piety, and in dying daily to herself. Her last years were filled with proofs of her resignation to the will of God. She had to experience long and painful diseases. Moreover, her husband being now dead, she suffered much from her family connexions and relations, who blamed her, as being instrumental in causing her son to take the resolution, not only of becoming a Catholic, but also of embracing the state of Catholic Missionary in the New World. Finally, after a most painful malady, which she bore with religious patience, she died the 27th of April, 1806, fortified by all the consolations of the departing.

Her son was born 22d of December, 1770, at the Hague, in Holland. At the age of 22, he went to America, to improve himself by travel, and prepare himself for his brilliant career in the world. Providence then intended him for a different one. He became a Catholic, and resolved to embrace the ecclesiastical state. Having spent some years at the seminary of the Sulpicians, in Baltimore, he was ordained Priest the 1st of March, 1793. He was shortly afterwards sent to exercise the holy ministry at Conawago, whence he visited an immense district, and finally fixed his residence, in 1799, in a place which he afterward called Loretto. At first there was but a very small number of families there; but soon, numerous congregations were insensibly formed. The Prince Abbe Gallitzin entirely devoted himself to the service of his flock. His charity, the liberality of his zeal, his perseverance in the midst of privations of every kind, secured for him the esteem and confidence of all. From Conawago, where there were a great many Germans, he went to Taneytown to exercise the ministry. He proceeded to Cumberland, accompanied by many of his former parishioners, to form a settlement. But he finally fixed himself in Cambria, Pennsylvania, at his favorite spot, Loretto. He was the counsellor and guide of his people, both in temporal and spirituals. A pension, which he received from his family, he generously applied to the support of the colonists in their wants, and he was truly their father. It was in the midst of these apostolic labors, and after having published several controversial works, that the Prince Abbe de Gallitzin died the 6th of May, 1840, at Loretto, now the diocese of Pittsburgh.

Such is the notice which the eminent Church Historian, Rothenacker, has inserted in his history, relative to Madame Gallitzin and her Rev. son, which I have translated with some corrections. The writer of this, as well as many of his surviving friends in Cambria, remember with what sentiments of love and veneration he spoke of his beloved mother. Soon after the melancholy intelligence of her death, he prepared to celebrate her obsequies in a manner which displayed the feelings of such a son for the loss of such a mother. The church of Loretto was covered with deep mourning for the occasion, and a solemn Mass De Requiem was sung by himself for the repose of her departed soul, in the midst of his flock, who assembled to console with him on the mournful news of her death. And ever afterwards, he entertained for his departed mother, the same feelings as the great Augustine did for Monica. "If any one think it a sin that I thus wept for my mother, whose small part of an hour, and a mother who many years had wept for me, that I might live to thy eyes O Lord, let him not deride me for it, but rather, if charity be great, let him weep also for my sins before thee!"

Joseph Bonaparte. Among the new literary announcements, in France there is one which possesses, not only much importance in itself, but a strong attraction for American as well as European readers.—An abridgement of Prince Jerome Napoleon has issued a prospectus of the memoirs and political and military correspondence of King Joseph (Count de Surville), with editorial notes. M. Du Cassie, the aid, is originally known by several publications of his own on military history and literature. The memoirs will occupy eight large octavo volumes, and comprise eight hundred inedited letters of Napoleon, twelve hundred of his brother Joseph, and five or six hundred from persons who were elevated and prominent under the Republic, the Consulate and the Empire.—The materials have all been furnished by the Prince of Musignano, grandson and heir of King Joseph. The King some years before his death, wrote a portion of his memoirs, which will be printed as it was left, with a biographical sketch prefixed from the pen of M. Du Cassie. The seventh volume will consist of Joseph's correspondence with the Emperor Napoleon in 1815; his departure for America, and his residence in the new world, until the revolution of 1830. The 5th, and 6th volumes include narratives of the wars in Naples, Spain and France, in 1814.—The price of each volume is six francs, by subscription. The first will appear immediately, and the rest successively, every month.

A resolution has been introduced into the Kentucky Legislature which provides that the Keeper of the Penitentiary shall procure a suitable chemical dye, such as will stain the cuticle or outer surface of the skin perfectly black, so that it cannot be washed off or in any way removed until time shall wear it away and nature furnish a new cuticle or surface, and that with this dye he shall have the use of each male convict painted thoroughly black, and renew the application so often as may be necessary to keep it so, until within one month of the expiration of his sentence, when it shall be discontinued for the purpose of permitting nature to restore the feature to its original hue, preparatory to the second advent of its owner into the world.

The North Carolina papers are discussing means to draw foreign emigration to that State. It seems that of the twenty-one millions of acres of land in that State less than six millions are improved; and for these six millions there is not one laborer for every twenty-five acres, whereas a high state of cultivation would require five times as many. There is also a great demand for common laborers for public works, railways, plank roads, &c.

A Texas mail contractor excuses himself for failing to perform his service as per schedule, by alleging that the mosquitoes are actually so bad upon his route, as to make it dangerous to the life of man and beast to travel it at the season of recent fairs.
