

ARRIVAL OF THE PACIFIC

New York, July 24. No battles of importance have taken place since last accounts.

The Baltic fleet had temporarily withdrawn from Germany.

Prussia is endeavoring to force Austria into new negotiations, and strong suspicion is entertained of Austria's good faith towards the allies.

The latest intelligence says, that Prussia had sent a special envoy to Austria, urging that Government to refrain from further steps with France and England, but rather to join Prussia in new negotiations for peace.

Austria having at the instance of Prussia, commended the advance of her army into Wallachia, much distrust was again excited of her intentions.

The Prussians are not in a hurry to evacuate Wallachia, on the contrary the Czar's letter to Prussia says that under any circumstances he insists on retaining his line on the Sereth for strategic reasons. Considerable mystification exists in relation to the Great Powers.

Austria has again resorted to mediation, and it was expected that a fortnight would elapse before the next phase of the negotiations transpired.

There is no actual war news, excepting an action at Gurgova, on the 5th of July, when the Turks crossed the river in force, and meeting with the Russians, a battle ensued, in which the latter lost 500 in killed and wounded.

The Russians still occupy the Danube bank, from the Alata downwards.

The French and English troops continue to concentrate between Varna and Schumla.

40,000 men of the allied troops are now in Varna.

It was reported that the bombardment of Kronstadt was very successful.

Austria announces a new voluntary loan of 500,000,000 florins at 95 for 100 per cent—specific dividends.

Greece was still quiet and Montenegro was professing friendship towards Austria.

From Asia there is nothing new.

The Russians are forming a camp of 30,000 men between Bucharest and the Danube.

It was reported from Berlin that Baron Manteuffel was immediately to leave for London on a mission to conciliate the opposition of the Government to the new peace negotiations.

It was also reported that the Czar will agree to abandon the line of the Sereth and withdraw all his troops into Russian territories during the peace negotiations.
