How shall know thee in the sphere which keeps The disembodied spirits of the dead, When all of thee that time could wither sleeps And perishes among the dust we tread?

For I shall feel the sting of ceaseless pain If there I meet thy presence not; Nor hear the voice I love, nor read again In thy serenest eyes the tender thought.

My name on earth was ever in thy prayer, And must thou never utter it in heaven?

In the resplendence of that glorious sphere And larger movements of the unfettered mind Wilt thou forget the love that joined us here

Yet though thou wearest the glory of the sky, Wilt thou not keep the same beloved name, The same thoughtful brow, and gentle eye, Lovelier in heaven's sweet climate, yet the

ORIGIN OF THE FORGET-ME-NOT.

A German Iradition.

Among Silesian plains where glide The Oder streams, in slow meander, Upon a fair bright eventide Of old, two lovers came to wander. And if from sunset's gorgeous dyes Some emblem meet they sought to borrow It was to see in these fair skies,

Hopes for some far diviner morrow. And if-while o'er its silvery spray They bent to view the singing water, Where foam bells flashed in joyous play, A thought was mingling with the dream, Which in that hour did thrill and quiver, And their heart strings-it might seem

"A boon! a boon!" the maiden cried: "The meadow flowers are fair to gather-Hairbells, and daisies, sunny-eyed, And cowslip, child of April weather; King-cups and crocuses, that fling A golden glimmer o'er the meadows: And lies o'er the glassy spring,

Of music rolling on forever!

That blend to view their own white shadows "But unavailing these are flung. In blushing bloom of pearly whiteness. The while for me so idly hung Those buds of blue celestial brightness, That gem the wave's opposing shore, Upon my grasp which vain would measur That glittering space of water o'er, Bespread like some attainless treasure."

"The boon be thine, fair love!" he cried; And, through that glittering crystal dashing He wended fast where o'er the tide The blue gleam of those flowers was flashing He reck'd not of the treacherous flood. Outspread in deepening paths before him While on, in eager, ardent mood,

Unto the flowery brize he bore him! Alas! alas! the watery zone Around him clung with mightier clasping But the goal is reached, the prize is won, Triumphant in his resolute grasping! He turned him proudly to the strand, And cried, while o'er the o'erwhelming river, He flung the flowers with dying hand-

"Forget me not!" and passed forever! Forget me not! and at her feet, Where ne'er had love laid truer token, They lay, whose task was now but meet To wreathe a heart whose hope was broken! Thence ever grew that name to be So dear unto affection parted-

The flower of love's fidelity, The motto of the constant-hearted.

"Me have forgot de name; but what be dat ting dat nibble de grass?"
"O," said the landlady, "a cow?" "No, no," eagerly interrupted the French-

"A sheep, perhaps," said she.

"A bull ?"

"Perhaps you mean a horse?"

'No, no, not de horse; but what be de wee's wife's name?" "A mare?"

"Oui! de mare's two daughters vare at wrch dis morning-two vera pretty young ladies; dey put de water in my moutn!
