

strength or endurance. Its secrecy is calculated to give it temporary success, but that very feature will insure its speedy and final repudiation. The party that has beaten Federalism in so many shapes will not be conquered by an enemy which avows no political principles at all, or which is ashamed to make that avowal publicly and in the face of the people. The Eagle will not be hawked at and brought down by the mousing owl.

We regard the defeat of Gov. Bigler as a great misfortune to the State, and we feel sure that history will so record it. Nevertheless, let us give the measures of his successor a fair and impartial consideration. The tree will be known by its fruits. If he boldly uses the veto against the corrupting influence of incorporated wealth; if he does not prostitute the prerogative of the paroling power to the use of his political friends; if he economizes the public treasury; if he keeps the oath which he takes in his inauguration, and disregards that which he took in the Know-Nothing Lodge on the 16th of June last, at the corner of Ninth and Arch streets, in this city, we will be bound to confess that his administration is a better thing than we hoped. But if, on the other hand, the influence of his office shall be lent out to the evil purposes of bad men—if he stir up religious bigotry and strife among the people—if he squanders the money of the tax-payers or despoils the Commonwealth of her public works, without adequate consideration—if he acknowledges the sworn obligations he owes to his subterranean party for services rendered in his election, as being more binding than the fealty he owes to the Constitution—then he is entitled to no forbearance, his name will become a hissing and a by-word, and the short period of his power will be remembered hereafter as we remembered the blights and mildews, the times of famine and drought and potato rot, when all the years of plenty and prosperity are forgotten.

We ask you, fellow citizens, to consider and reflect carefully upon the political topics which the present condition of things suggest. Our opponents work in secret. They prefer darkness rather than light. They have no principles, but the Democracy rely on a fearless, frank, and full avowal of their sentiments. The contrast between such a course and that of a party which shrinks from all public investigation, is alone sufficient to give the Democracy an enviable moral superiority which must in a very short time secure them the political ascendancy among a people so marked by the many virtues of truth and boldness, as are the freemen of Pennsylvania.

The Temporal Power of the Pope.
In the U. S. House of Representatives, on Thursday, in Committee on the Pacific Railroad bill, Mr. Chandler, of this city, took occasion to explain and vindicate the Catholics of the United States from the imputations of the Know-Nothing advocates. We have only a sketch of his eloquent speech, and shall look with interest for the full report, which he will, no doubt, very soon present.

Mr. Chandler rose in reply to the Know-Nothing speech of Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, who, he said, had made special and insular remarks regarding the Roman Catholic Church, in favor of the incultation of the charge of latent treason against the members, or at least an imputation that there is an article of their religious faith which overrides all fealty to this Government and which would render them unworthy of public trust, suspected citizens and dangerous officers. Standing here almost alone, in the assertion of a fact which seems to be doubted, he said he was without the sympathy of a host of partisans to sustain him and to pardon the infirmity of his defence of the principles which he advocated. He denied that the Pope of Rome has, or claims for himself, the right to interfere with the political relations of any other country than that of which he is himself a subject; and he denied the right of the Pope, resulting from his divine office, to interfere between subjects and sovereigns, and citizens and governments.

While he made this denial he acknowledged all his obligations to that church of which he was a humble member. He would not yield a single dogma, nor explain it a way to suit the spirit of the times. No! He believed all that the Church believes and teaches as religious dogmas, and most regard himself as involved in the general censure of the gentlemen from Massachusetts. He clearly and distinctly denied that the power of the Pope extends to a grain beyond his spiritual relations or infractions in the least degree on the duty which any Roman Catholic owes to the government which he lives. If, he said, by the Providence of God, the Bishop of Rome should possess himself of an army to invade the territory of the United States, or assail the rights of our country, he would find no more earnest antagonists than the Roman Catholics. If I should not be here to vote supplies to our army, and too old to take part in the battle, I would be found in the privacy of my chamber, or at the foot of the altar, imploring God for the safety of my country and the defeat of the invaders. [Applause, which Mr. Orr, Chairman of the Committee, checked, reminding gentlemen that it was unbecoming in a deliberative assembly.]

Mr. Chandler resumed—If the spirit of conquest should seize on the wearer of the tiara, and he should seek to subjugate Italy, provoking the arms of other nations against his own State, I would look on the chances of defeat of his arms as coolly and complacently as on the mischievous schemes of any other ambitious monarch. This was his belief, and fully and openly avowed by every Bishop in the United States. In proof, he read from the writings of Bishops England, Kenrick, Hughes, Spalding, Troy, and others. He seemed to utter less than the whole truth, and he referred to other times, when the Pope deposed kings, but only when it was required by existing constitutions or for the benefit and at the instance of the governed. In the language of Bishop England, "God never gave to the Pope any temporal power to depose kings, or interfere with political concerns, and any rights which the successor of St. Peter claims for that purpose, must be derived from some other source."

He condemned the inequality in citizens, which the Know-Nothing seeks to establish, saying that if this should be done, it would not be long before that class will demand as a boon, what freedom claim, and in conclusion said, "With my hand on my heart, and my eyes towards Heaven with reverence, I appeal to God to witness the truth of the assertions which I have made, with the conviction of knowledge and the credibility of the testimony I have addressed from others."

Michigan.
The Governor of Michigan says in his Annual Message, that the total debt of that State amounts to $3,313,000, and that there is $500,000 in the Treasury. He recommends a General Railroad Law, the prohibition of Small Bills, the repeal of a substitute to stop the sale of liquor in quantities less than one gallon, the amendment of the Constitution so as to limit legislative sessions to forty days in a year, and he goes against a general ban on law.

The Russian privateer, which arrived at San Francisco on the 1st of December, was a fine clipper ship of 800 tons, named Kamshatka, and said to have been built at New York. She mounted ten guns, and had a fine crew of one hundred able bodied men. She came from Sitka, on the coast of Russian America, and when approaching San Francisco ran close along shore, not knowing whether the Allied fleet was or was not cruising off the harbor. Arriving at night, she anchored on the bar, and remained perfectly safe from attack until morning, when she went up to the city. The Allies were completely off their guard, for the English frigate President was in the harbor at the time, and left two days afterwards to hover about the vicinity on the watch for her. The French frigate Alceste and the English steamer Virago were also expected there. So the privateer will hardly be able to get off.

Important News for the Shareholders in Perham's Third Gift Enterprise.
It will be seen by reference to advertisement in our paper of to-day, that the Committee appointed by the Shareholders at their last meeting, have issued a call for a final meeting of all interested, to get their instructions in reference to the distribution of the Gift property. We are pleased to find the matter so near a consummation, and hope that Mr. Perham will receive the patronage he so well deserves for the liberality and energy displayed in getting up and prosecuting this stupendous enterprise. Orders for tickets should be sent in immediately. There are fortunes in reserve for somebody.
