

stimulated and the people, machine, process or chemical combination, has been discovered and presented to supply the want. In proportion to the numbers occupied, the science of agriculture has been advanced in some parts of the world, in this, the new, but we are on the whole, impelled by the energies of a young and free people, with State agricultural societies, and they who will maintain the advance must content themselves with no less than the best. Meanwhile, we may regard with just satisfaction our improvement in machinery and utensils applicable to husbandry, some of which have gained such distinguished consideration at the great exhibitions in England and France.

Your vast territory, your central position, your climate, your soil, your facilities for reaching the great commercial marts, the boundless resources of your mineral wealth contributing to your general power, impose upon the sterling population of the Keystone State the duty of taking the lead in practical husbandry and in agricultural art and science. Nature and the events of history have imposed upon you, in these respects, and in other responsibilities which, under the Providence of God, can rest upon no other State. You, my countrymen of Pennsylvania, constitute the political centre of this glorious Union of States, in which you are an impregnable empire, and which you would be an empire doomed to war, distraction, and decay. How are these your grave responsibilities to be met? How are these your solemn duties to be discharged? If ever this noble arch of liberty shall be undermined, or shall crumble, the crash of the Keystone will be most fearful and fatal—and it ought to be.

I can never touch the soil of Pennsylvania without involuntarily recurring to the stirring incidents of her history, which instead of being shaded or obscured by time, are inevitably, as years roll on, to be brought out in a stronger, clearer, and more glorious light. Within her borders the Declaration of Independence was drafted, signed, and proclaimed to the world. To the memorable convention of the United Colonies, on the 25th of June, 1776, she declared, through her delegates, met in provincial conference, in favor of absolute separation from the mother country.

Within her borders the Constitution under which we live, was framed, adopted, and signed by the Father of his country, and his associates, whose patriotic labors, like his own, will never be forgotten, though signatures may fade and parchment perish. Oh! how beautifully have the uncalculating courage and personal sacrifices of the fathers been requited to the children by the countless common blessings which that Constitution has so lavishly conferred! Do not, my fellow-citizens, convert it to purposes not embraced in its design! Do not depart from the strict construction of its granted powers which has secured such harmonious action, and a degree of progress, happiness and security, socially and politically, of which the history of nations furnishes no example! Do not for a moment indulge the desire, or harbor the thought, that you may enjoy the privileges which the Constitution confers without according to each and every one of the sister States of the confederation all the rights and immunities which it designed to secure them! As honorable men you can not do it! So long as you are content to live under the compact maintain it sacredly in all its parts, in its letter and in its spirit. Without a cheerful, practical obedience to all its obligations, the Key Stone, firmly as it seems to be set, may be shaken and trouble in its place.

Your past, however, is the best guaranty for the future. From the days of William Penn, eminently a peace loving and a peace cultivating people, you have shrunk from no responsibility, and faltered before no danger which threatened our common country. This was signally verified in the struggle of the Revolution, in the war of 1812, and in that late war, when at the first blast of the summing trumpet, your sons hastened to their weapons, and forming themselves in serried columns, tended more regiments to the Republic than the government with a proper regard to patriotic enrollments in other States could consistently accept. But there is another class deserving, if possible, still higher praise. I mean the fathers of those gallant sons, the men who own and cultivate the land, the unobtrusive Union loving, law-abiding, agricultural community represented here to-day, that great, abounding interest compared with which all others are but factions. And now in conclusion, fellow-citizens, permitting to say wherever fortune may direct your footsteps, it will be the source of just pride, that you hail from Pennsylvania, but in this you are the highest pride and the least consciousness of security, at home or abroad, will rest in the fact that you are an American citizen.

During the delivery of this eloquent reply, the President was frequently interrupted with demonstrations of applause. After some eloquent observations from Gov. Pollock and Ex-Governor Bigler, the ceremonies of reception terminated, and the President proceeded to inspect the various articles offered for exhibition.

Mexico.—It appears by recent advices from Mexico, that Carrera, being unable to get any means to carry on the government, has resigned, recommending General Vega to assume the responsibility of administering the government, without a dollar in the treasury. Carrera attempted to raise a loan but failed, and then he retired. The government troops declared that they considered it their duty to sustain whatever government the nation might choose to establish, and that in the same manner as they had supported Juan Gomez Carrera, they would support General Vega. They then elected Gen. Vega chief of the government of the capital, undertaking to observe the plan of Ayutla, and General Vega himself subsequently declared himself in favor of it, as demanded by the nation. He immediately entered on the duties of the high position in which he found himself placed, taking the title of Local Chief of the Revolution for the District, appointed a Junta of the District, and filled certain offices. Carrera, on resigning, published an address, vindicating his course, and explaining the circumstances under which he felt it necessary to resign. The various chiefs of the revolution are now quarrelling among themselves, with little hope of any adjustment leading to the establishment of a permanent government.

A JURY REUNION.—In a recent criminal trial in Michigan, the wife and infant child of the accused, accompanied by a minister of the gospel in the relation of a friend of the family, were constantly present, and afforded the counsel for the defence an opportunity, which was not lost, to make a very pathetic appeal to the jury. The judge thereupon took occasion to state, in his charge, that he "hoped never again to witness such things brought into court as a part of the machinery of the defence."

DIED.—In this place, on the 8th inst., at the residence of his son-in-law Wm. Mitchell, James McDONALD, in the eighty third year of his age.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. For the rapid Cure of COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION. THIS remedy is offered to the community with the confidence we feel in an article which seldom fails to realize the happiest efforts that can be desired. It is a simple and useful remedy, and so numerous the cases of cure, that almost every section of the country abounds in persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use. When once tried its superiority over every other medicine of its kind, is too apparent to escape observation and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate to ask a doctor to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs, which are incident to our climate. Nothing has called louder for the earnest enquiry of medical men, than the alarming prevalence and fatality of consumptive complaints, nor has any one class of diseases had more of their investigations and cure. But as yet no adequate remedy has been provided, on which the public could depend for protection from attacks upon the respiratory organs, until the introduction of the CHERRY PECTORAL. This article is the product of a long, laborious, and I believe successful endeavor, to furnish the community with such a remedy. Of this last statement the American people are now themselves prepared to judge, and I appeal with confidence to their decision. There is a dependence to be placed in what men of every class and station certify it has done for them, if we can trust our own senses, when we see dangerous affections of the throat and lungs yield to it, if we can depend on the assurance of intelligent Physicians, who make it their business to know, in short if there is any reliance upon anything, then it is irrefragably proved that this medicine does relieve and does cure the class of diseases it is designed for, beyond any and all others that are known to mankind. If this be true, it cannot be too freely published, nor be too widely known. The afflicted should know it. A remedy that cures, is priceless to them. Parents should know it, their children are priceless to them. All should know it, for health can be preserved to no one. Not only should it be circulated here, but everywhere, not only in this country, but in all countries. How faithfully we have acted on this conviction, is shown in the fact that already this article has made the circles of the globe. The sun never sets on its limits. No continent is without it, and but few people. Although not in so general use in other countries as in this, it is employed by the more intelligent in almost all civilized countries. It is extensively employed in both America, in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the far off islands of these. Life is as dear to its possessors here as here, and they grasp at a valuable remedy with even more avidity. Unlike most preparations of its kind, it is an expensive composition of costly material. Still it is afforded to the public at a reasonably low price, and what is vastly more important to them, its quality is never sacrificed to decline from its original standard of excellence. Every bottle of this medicine, now manufactured, is as good as ever has been made heretofore, or as we are capable of making. No toil or cost is spared in maintaining it in the best perfection which it is possible to produce. Hence the patient who procures the genuine Cherry Pectoral, can rely on having as good an article as has ever been sold by those who testify to its cures. By pursuing this course, I have the hope of doing some good in the world, as well as the satisfaction of believing that duty has been done already.
