The free State people were thus either driven out or reduced to submission, and finding the government had become an engine of tyranny and oppression, the people assembled peaceably at Topeka, to take measures preliminary to the admission of Kansas into the Union as a State. The proper course now would be to repeal the act of 1854, and organize Kansas anew as a free territory; or if Congress will not do that, let them declare all the action of this spurious Legislature inoperative and void, and provide a new government for that territory.

The reading of the reports occupied some three hours. Both were ordered to be printed.

The Luzerne Gang—Further Developments—Another Watchman Arrested—Highway Robbery—A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing—Arrest of Hiram Sheers in Schuylker county—Great Excitement—Expected Arrests in Tioga County, Penna.—Safety of Rutter, his Appearance and Complaints—John R. Harper and Brown alias Waite.

ELMIRA, Chemung Co., N. Y., March 14.—Yesterday morning another of our somewhat celebrated village watchmen, George Loup, (brother of Henry Loup, already under heavy charges,) was arrested and committed, in default of two thousand dollars bail, on a charge of highway robbery, committed in Elmira, in November 1854, while acting as a policeman! Rutter alleges that he and Loup—who seems to be "a wolf in sheep's clothing"—with another individual, not yet arrested, accosted a young man named James Dickson, about eleven o'clock at night, and pretended they were all watchmen, demanded he should accompany them, which he refusing to do, Rutter seized him by the collar and tripped him; as he was falling Loup struck him on the head with a mace, stunning him so that the gang had ample time to rifle his pockets of $17.80 in cash, and a promissory note. The proceeds they afterwards divided equally among themselves. The night was very dark, and Dickson was unable to recognize any of the party at the time they accosted him.

Our Sheriff, who left Schuylker county on the 13th, to arrest some alleged members of the Luzerne horse-thief gang, succeeded in capturing Hiram Sheers, formerly of this place, who left here suddenly soon after Rutter's confession was made public in the Dispatch. Sheers was yesterday (Thursday) sent down here, ironed, while Sheriff Gregg went some twelve miles further in search of two more of the gang, named Smith and Thompson, both of whom are probably arrested. Sheers was charged with receiving stolen goods. Rutter being the only witness against him, and (in default of bail in one thousand dollars,) committed to our prison.

The almost daily arrest of some member of this daring gang of miscreants, creates an intense excitement in our community, and were not the statements of Rutter in many instances strongly corroborated by other circumstances, many would be inclined to regard them as "Munchausen stories"—indeed, it is scarcely credible that so extensive a gang should have so long existed in this State and Pennsylvania.

Some developments, recently made induced Julius Sherwood, Esq., a well known lawyer from Tioga county, Pa., to leave for Wellsboro yesterday, to secure the arrest of three or four of the gang in that vicinity—so that Chemung county is by no means "alone in her glory."

Rutter, whose testimony has been so useful in scattering the gang, is in custody at the Brainard House, and some think he is much safer, at least for the present, in the hands of the law than elsewhere—as very many folks are interested in his disappearance. He, however, expresses no great anxiety, and likes his quarters very much—smoking his cigar calmly, while others partake more or less of the prevailing excitement. He is a medium sized man, with a sandy complexion, red hair, and goatee—the latter quite heavy for a man of his size—strongly and compactly built, active and sprightly in appearance, bright and grey eyes, rather florid complexion, and of what phrenologists would denominate a combined muscular, nervous and vital temperament. There is everything about him indicating muscular activity and power of endurance. He could probably ride a horse—after having suddenly and shrewdly come into possession of him—fifty miles, (if circumstances required it,) at a rapid rate, and come out as fresh as the next man. Give two rods the start, on foot, and we venture the assertion that most men would have more than they could attend to, in attempting to overtake and secure him. Judging from his appearance I should say that he was not naturally a degraded villain, but one made so by the unfavorable circumstances which have surrounded him. He is evidently one of that class of individuals possessed of strong go-ahead-a-tive powers, which coupled with great daring and caution, and misdirected by unfavorable circumstances, have (in the absence of "hold-back straps") impelled him to pursue successfully his remarkable career of crime.

While enjoying his present quarters, he finds fault with the eating accommodations in your jail. While he admits that the boarders in such establishments should not be fed very high, he thinks bread and water merely is rather too light a diet—especially when it is given out in homeopathic doses—for even prisoners to live on from day to day. How is this? You used to feed your prisoners better years ago.

John R. Harper, arrested in Buffalo, is quite a small man, (so Rutter tells me,) while Brown is a large, stout-looking fellow. I saw him, for the first time, at our jail yesterday. I asked him if his name was Brown, and he rather surlyly replied that they called him by that name. He seems very uneasy and dispirited. Probably his close quarters don't agree with him.

LATER

More Arrests—Attempt to remove Rutter by Burning the Hotel—Increase of the Police Force—Excitement.

In addition to the above, we learn by the Elmira Advertiser, that in Wells township, Bradford county, Pa., John Rowley and Amos Baker, jr., have been arrested, on the testimony of Rutter, charged with burglary, in robbing the house of Joseph Borham of some money Baker had paid him a day or two before. Baker is also charged with receiving the horse stolen from David Hull of Bedford county, Pa., last summer. The Advertiser gives the following account of a most desperate attempt to get rid of Rutter's testimony by burning the hotel where he was confined: There was quite a panic in town on Tuesday evening, growing out of the recent horse-theft excitement & examinations, but whether well founded or not, we are unable to say. It seems that some daring villain, on the preceding night, set fire to the Brainard House—having probably entered the building with those visiting Rutter at his room—and, as a company of suspicious looking characters were known to have arrived from parts unknown, in the fore part of the evening alluded to, (Tuesday,) and put up at the Chemung House, ordering their horses to be ready at call any time between twelve and four o'clock an apprehension that something wrong was in the wind, very naturally seized upon the public mind.

It was also reported that an unusually large number of desperate looking characters came in on the Williamsport train, and strong fears were entertained that an attempt to again fire the Brainard House, break jail and free the prisoners therein confined, or capture Rutter for the sake of putting an end both to him and his testimony, would be made. These fears were not a little increased by the fact the Brainard House was visited by the company of suspicious fellows spoken of, one of whom was heard to make some harsh observations with regard to Rutter. So strong did the apprehension become that some desperate scheme of villainy was on foot that the President of the village was waited on, and a large additional police force put on duty for the night, with instructions to keep a close watch of the suspected parties, and the points which it was feared they might assail. The night passed away, however, without any unusual occurrence; but we are by no means disposed to believe that the precautions adopted were not both necessary and well timed.

That the Horse Thief Gang are deeply—we may say vitally—interested in disposing of Rutter, there can be no doubt, and a fire, or anything else which would throw the community into a panic, would afford the best opportunity of accomplishing this (to them) all important object. While, therefore, he remains with us, he and his former confederates, in jail, cannot be too carefully guarded. To be outwitted just at this time by the members of the Horse Thief Gang who are still at large, would be most humiliating to the parties who are engaged in ferreting out this desperate nest of villains, and at once open the way for the most of their number to escape unwhipped of justice. Let our authorities, therefore, stand to their arms, and put none but brave men, true and tried, on guard! If this band of robbers wish to throw themselves into the arena against the people of Elmira, we believe in meeting them at the very outset, and nipping their villainous schemes in the bud.

Arrest and examination of Enoch Tooker, for Highway Robbery—James Smith arrested for receiving a Horse stolen from John Hershberger of Bedford county, Pa.—Bradford Warner, charged with Larceny, and Receiving Stolen Goods—Arrival of Harper—His Admissions—Appearance, and Departure with Brown and Rutter—The latter anxious to get away—How he stands Cross-Examination—Thirteen Arrests, in all, on his Testimony.

ELMIRA, Chemung Co., N. Y. March 17.—On the evening of Friday last, 14th inst., Enoch Tooker, (who had been arrested the previous evening at Bath, Stuben county,) was brought before Police Justice Brush, on a charge of highway robbery. He is accused of having been a confederate with Rutter and George Loup, in the robbery of John Dickson, on one of our public streets, on the night of the 1st of November, 1854. The amount of money taken was $17.80. Rutter and Dickson were the only witnesses examined, and as they were not examined in the presence of each other, it was remarkable how the latter's testimony verified that of Rutter. The only important discrepancy between them is the street on which the robbery took place, and that is not material. Rutter's testimony in this case was taken on Friday evening, and I send you it in full, as well as that given by Dickson during the afternoon of Saturday.

[We are unable to publish this testimony as full as reported by our correspondent. The following is its substance.] Rutter testified that he was at Tooker's house in the summer of 1854, with George Loup, late at night; a young butcher was there, who drank with them. Loup and Tooker agreed to rob him. Rutter and Loup followed the butcher out; Tooker slung up his saloon and followed. A short distance from the house Rutter seized him, told him he was a policeman and would take him to the watch-house; got his pocket book, threw him down, and ran away—Loup stood close by. Next morning divided the proceeds—sixteen or seventeen dollars—with Loup and Tooker, at the saloon. Expected to have got about a hundred dollars. The butcher had been drinking and showing his money, and Tooker plied him with liquor to make him drunk. (Dickson's testimony corroborated Rutter in every essential particular.)

When the testimony closed the Justice, after a few remarks decided to hold the defendant for trial at the next Court of Sessions; and in default of $2,000 bail, Tooker was remanded to jail.

James Smith, of Hector, Schuylker county, (arrested on Friday) was brought before Justice Foster, on Saturday morning, on charge of receiving or purchasing a horse, about December, 1855, knowing it to be stolen, the property of John Hershberger, of Bedford county Pennsylvania. John Rutter testified as follows:

Became acquainted with defendant at Raymond Jones' in Southport; saw him next at his own house, near Hector; went there to sell a pair of stolen horses; made a bargain with him to sell one of them; we were to meet at Horseheads to complete the sale, so that if anything should afterwards appear against him he would be safe. I was to sell the horse before witnesses, that he could prove he bought him honestly. Met him at Horseheads at the time, and he was to give me $50—don't know what price was asked before witnesses, but they were lead to believe that he would give me more. The horse (a mouse-colored pony) was stolen at Kiskadequillas Valley, in Huntingdon or Mifflin counties, Pa. Don't know the name of the owner; the reason I want to sell him the horse was that he once wanted to trade me a stolen gold watch for a stolen sorrel mare. Have had transactions with him since.

Wm. Reynolds, of Bedford county, Pa., identified the horse as having been stolen from John Hershberger by a man named Green, last September. Defendant told him he traded for him with Wellington Smith. Wellington Smith (a nephew of defendant) testified that he had traded for the horse with Rutter, in good faith, and sold him the same in good faith to his uncle, the defendant.

The accused waived a further examination, and gave bail for his appearance at the next term of the Court of Sessions, in the sum of $2,000.

At half-past one, on Saturday afternoon, Bradford Warner (also of Schuylker county) was brought before Justice Foster for examination, on a charge of receiving stolen horses. On his appearance in the Justice's office, he was arrested on a charge of larceny, in stealing a log chain, valued at six dollars and fifty cents, from Robert Beckwith, in August, 1853; and as the counsel for the prosecution was not ready for an examination on the first charge, the prisoner was examined on the new one. At the conclusion of the examination he was held to bail to answer. His examination on the charge of receiving stolen horses will probably take place to-day.

DEPARTURE OF RUTTER, BROWN AND HARPER. Sunday evening, Sheriff Welsh, Colonel Conitor, and Mr. Gamble, left at 11 o'clock for Philadelphia, on their way home, taking with them the three most distinguished members of the horse thief gang, viz: John Rutter, John Brown and John R. Harper—the latter was brought to this place late Saturday night, from Buffalo. Harper and Rutter roomed together Saturday night, at the Brainard, and are as sociable in each other's company as ever they were. Harper admits, in the main, all of Rutter's statements concerning his transactions here and elsewhere. I saw him in his room, Sunday. He is a man about Rutter's size, of light complexion, has a lively, pleasant, countenance, and sports an unpretending light-colored goatee—His countenance betrays the cunning so necessary to make a complete rogue, but apart from that there is nothing suspicious about him.

During Rutter's stay here, he has been waited upon daily by hundreds of persons, and he is glad to get away, as he has been kept upon the rack almost constantly, in appearing against all the members of the gang that have been arrested here within the last ten or twelve days, and also in answering the hundreds of questions put to him by the numerous persons who have had horses, cattle and other property stolen from them in this vicinity. Much valuable property, thro' his information, has already been obtained by the rightful owners, and much more will yet be secured. I think he is sincerely honest in his endeavors to expose his late confederates in crime. He does it, seemingly, without malice, and (as he says) for the good of the community. He certainly has a remarkable memory, and never asserts anything as true unless he is "sure he's right." He is a very hard witness to make anything against on a cross-examination. The lawyers here have cross-examined him closely, but have ceased their abuse of him for several days past, as they made nothing by it previously.

Seven of the gang, who have been arrested and had their examinations here, are in jail, in default of bail. Four others obtained bail, and are at large. Two of the gang are also in jail in Bradford county, Pa. The whole number arrested here and in Bradford county, on Rutter's information, so far, is thirteen. Add Brown and Harper to the list, and the number that he has already informed against is swelled to fifteen. Other parties would be arrested in this vicinity, but as Sheriff Welsh had to leave for home, with Rutter, those others will be compelled to let the remaining members of the gang hereabouts have their freedom for a short time to come.

JOHN R. HARPER, one of the Luzerne Gang, recently arrested in Buffalo, and now in Indiana jail, in this State is thus described by the Elmira (New York) Advertiser, of March 19th: "On Sunday we visited this notorious character in his room, at the Brainard House, and conversed with him most freely for more than an hour. He is a larger man than Rutter, and although but twenty-three years of age, is without doubt the most accomplished, reckless and daring member of the gang. He is a little above the medium stature, firmly and compactly built, has a large and remarkably active brain, a vigorous constitution, a 'cold stony eye' of a bluish gray color, a bold defiant manner, and every visible indication of a shrewd, deep, smart, unscrupulous and determined villain.

We would do the fellow no injustice, but after testing him by what little knowledge of human nature we have picked up in the world, we cannot resist the conclusion that the commission of crime is as natural with him as the drawing of his vital breath; and that nothing but a lack of opportunity can keep him from it. He has been connected with the gang for about five years, and has, without doubt, done more service of a daring and dangerous nature than any one of the band. Indeed, however, of showing any remorse or shame, while detailing some of his exploits and narrow escapes, he seemed rather to glory in his deeds. When the officers told him that he was a 'goner' at last, he made bold to tell them not to be too sure of their game, as he had been through many a tight place before, and would give them fair warning that they might yet, as in the case of the Paddy's flea, go to put their hand on him and find him not there.

Among other things, he stated that when, through the assistance of Rutter, Brown and Green, he broke jail, in Indiana Pennsylvania, he was taken out through a hole between bars of iron but eight and a half inches wide, and ten long. He had to be drawn through feet foremost, with his arms raised above his head, and by the united strength of these three strong men. It was such a 'tight fit' that the skin was badly scraped from his sides and shoulders, and the breath of life, for the time being, pressed out of his body. When he came out at last, the party all went down in a heap, 'pell-mell,' together, and he was nearly dead. He soon recovered, however, and the party made off with all possible haste, leaving the tools, ladders, &c., behind. To show his natural recklessness and villainy, we may add, that according to his own story, he broke into a farm house in less than an hour after his escape, to steal a supply of provisions for his journey, and on being suddenly confronted by the proprietor, while drinking from a milk jar in the house, he dashed the jar, milk and all at his head, knocking him down, and then escaped over his prostrate and bleeding form.

Before leaving he made a confession, with reference to the alleged crimes of the gang in this vicinity, in which he fully confirmed (so far as he knew) the statements made by Rutter, and expressed himself as ready on his return to Pennsylvania to make a clean breast of it, and disclose the truth concerning the whole gang. His principal reason for this is that several of his number, besides Rutter, have given information which has led to his arrest. One man by the name of Gibbs, in Buffalo, had been bribed by the officers for $30, to direct them where he might be found. A commission will probably be sent from here to take his testimony, under oath, unless it should be deemed best to bring him here to testify in connexion with Rutter, when those under arrest are placed on trial.

We have some charity and hope for Rutter but none whatever for Harper—fully believing that nothing short of States prison will be sufficient to protect the community from such depredations as have been engaging his attention for the last five years. We doubt not that he will soon find himself in the institution alluded to, (unless he escapes from jail,) as he stands no possible chance of a pardon in Pennsylvania.

AYER'S PILLS.

"Wisdom shall bow down to it, and the great of the earth shall kneel before it."
Never could this be said with more truth, than now applies to the remedy for ailments of the Throat and Lungs. The exalted in learning and power, acknowledge its supremacy, while both the little and the great can feel its benefits. The liberal-minded among those skilled to cure are free to own its mastery over distempers which have baffled their art. Those of exalted station are not ashamed to testify to its virtues, but deem it a duty and a pleasure to thus hold out the lamp of their experience to their suffering fellow-men.
