A HARD WINTER.—The snow drifts are not confined to the railways. The Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal says that the plank roads in that section are in a bad fix, and adds that in one place the drifts are so high that the gate keeper comes up through the scuttle in the roof of his house, and receives the toll by reaching up through a hole in the middle of the roof The additions made to the drifts Robert Brown by the recent fall have been so great that all communications through the scuttle is now cut off, and the toll is now paid to the gate keeper by dropping the money down the chimney!
