 The Montreal (Canada) Commercial Advertiser, in speaking of the people of this country, holds the following very complimentary language:

"The men of the Revolution are dead; their inferior children of 1812 are in their dotage; the present generation, raised on hot cakes and sweet fixins, and stimulated with tobacco juice, is all talk and no courage—as destitute of the stamina on which courage is founded as its mothers are of flesh. Look at the women: charming at sixteen, faded at twenty, toothless at twenty-five, hideous at thirty, dividing their time between their rocking-chairs and their beds, incapable of exertion, incompetent to exercise, ever-sighing, listless, lazy, straight up and down, like an old-fashioned clothes pin, making up the deficiency of their developments with whalebone, cotton and bran—are these the things to suckle heroes? The race has deteriorated, and is dwindling away; and but for the constant introduction of new and healthy blood from immigration, would disappear in a century."

The Men in the Coal Mine—A Thrilling Narrative!

Mr. Gilmore, of the Zanesville Gazette, has laid upon our table a pamphlet of some fifty pages, giving full and detailed particulars of the four men buried in the coal mine, on the 25th of June, of which we have already published accounts.

This most extraordinary affair excited interest throughout the whole country, and thousands rushed to the scene of disaster to lend a helping hand or add their sympathy in behalf of the sufferers.

We are glad that a full and authentic history is before the public in a form satisfactory to the public. Such was the rush for this little Narrative that the first edition of two thousand copies was sold in two days. Another edition is now out, and Mr. Edgell, one of the rescued after fourteen days imprisonment, will wait upon our citizens on Friday next with copies of the Narrative.

In their thrilling Narrative they say:
 "We experienced but little difficulty for want of air, though we were very much annoyed by the dust of which our bed was composed. It was very fine and dry, and every time we turned or moved, it seemed to raise a cloud. Even clearing our throats, when our faces were turned downwards, would blow the dust all over each other. Our throats and tongues and teeth would become coated with this disagreeable substance, so that it became necessary to scrape it off with our fingers, wherever we could reach it. It seemed to add very much to our thirst and kept us using the copper water continually. This water, although disagreeable at first, became rather pleasant toward the last. It seemed to possess some nourishment. It began to have a taste finally like sweet milk, or rather like the whey of buttermilk. We always felt better after drinking it."

We think we did not sleep much, nor long at a time. We were too cold to do so. Sometimes one of us would be able to sleep a little by getting in the middle and having another lie on the top for a coverlet. Edgell says that Pearson made the heaviest coverlet they had, and they couldn't bear him on very long at a time. We sometimes used the heads of others for pillows; but the pillow generally grumbled considerably before we occupied it as long as we desired.

We, of course had no way of measuring time, but we thought we could tell from the coolness of the air when evening came. We supposed there must be some crack in the bank through which the air was admitted, for there was an evident difference at regular intervals. We did not attempt, however, to keep any account of the days. It was a long unbroken night to us.

Toward the last Pearson did not go to the breakdown at all. Savage and Gatwood say that they finally became so weak that they could not go the whole distance without stopping once, and frequently twice, to rest. Edgell, however, was able to make the distance without resting.

Very little merriment was indulged in by any of us. Gatwood remembers having taken one laugh at an amusing quarrel which took place between Pearson and Edgell, as to who should sleep in the middle. Edgell also had a laugh at Ned Savage once. They had started on their hands and feet to go to the breakdown, and Ned, who was behind stumbled and fell, exclaiming as it happened, "I'll be darned if that ain't down once, for the first time."

Savage seemed to keep in better spirits than any of us. He was in the habit of lamenting less about his friends. His principle cause of trouble was concerning his want of sleep. He frequently became spunky because not allowed to sleep in the middle, and when his request was not granted he would threaten to tell his uncle "Duck" Mearns, and get us all a thrashing after he got out.

We did not make use of the oil as food. Edgell says that after they had been in about a week, or thereabout, he took one swallow of it. He found it very pleasant, resembling chicken gravy, as much as anything else he can think of. He did not taste it afterwards, nor did he tell the other boys, but threw the can into one of the empty rooms. He says, "I thought that death was certain at all events, and using the oil would only have prolonged our sufferings. I did not wish to be the last to die."

Query, was the strengthening quality of the water, attributable to the iron held in solution by it?

Everlasting honor to the heroic men who achieved their deliverance under difficulties and dangers unnumbered—Ohio Statesman.

Present to Gen. Cass.

Mr. Baell, formerly of Michigan, and late Sheriff of El Dorado county, California, has presented to the Hon. Lewis Cass a magnificent cane, which is described by the Cleveland Plaindealer as being of very heavy and choice wood, resembling rosewood, from the South Sea Islands, and is surrounded by an elegant and expensive California gold head, most elaborately wrought, and crowned with a large and finely polished piece of quartz.—Within the head, which is ingeniously contrived to open like a snuff-box, are deposited, in several compartments, specimens of gold dust from the dry diggings. And while it does credit to the donor, we feel assured that it will be duly appreciated by the recipient.

DEATH OF A DAUGHTER OF LUTHER MARTIN.

The Detroit (Mich.) Tribune records the death of Mrs. Juliet Scott, a venerable lady of that city, and adds—She was the last surviving child of the Hon. Luther Martin, deceased, who, in his day, was probably the most eminent lawyer in the U. States. He was formerly Attorney General of Maryland, and was the leading counsel of Aaron Burr on his great trial for treason. Mr. Martin was devotedly attached to his daughter Juliet, and gave her a thorough and polished education. For many years she was a shining star in the most cultivated society of New York, Baltimore and Washington. Mrs. Scott had been both an orphan and a widow for more than a quarter of a century prior to her decease. Over twenty years of this period she has resided in this city, during a portion of which time, in connexion with her most worthy daughters, she has been engaged in the honorable vocation of instructing the young, and many are the ladies of our city who will bear in grateful remembrance the name of Mrs. Scott, to whose careful training; both of intellect and heart, they have been placed under lasting obligations.

MISSOURI ELECT.—The St. Louis Democrat, the organ of the Benton Democrats, enlists heartily in support of Buchanan and Breckinridge. This is right, and Democratic. It is the duty of every man, who calls himself a Democrat, to abide by the decision of the National Convention and support its nominees, and of Missouri, spite of all alleged cause of complaint intused to support the ticket with hearty enthusiasm.

Before marriage the man is very much struck with the woman, and afterwards the woman is very much struck by the man. Punch says 'tis a striking piece of business throughout.

One of the transparencies at the Philadelphia ratification meeting bore the following inscription, referring to our political opponents:
 "First we Polled, then we Pierced, and now we'll Buck them."

The London papers mention that a monument to the memory of the Rev. John Wesley is to be erected in his native town, Epworth, in Lincolnshire.

BARCLAY, the late British Consul at New York, who recently received his dismissal at the hands of President Pierce, has been in the possession of that fat berth for the last sixteen years.
