

A Sudden Change.

The opposition factions to the Democracy are a queer set of mortals. A great change has suddenly come over the spirit of the dream. But a few days ago, and the prominent men of the Know-Nothing and Black Republican party were zealously discussing the merits and claims of the rival candidates of the Cincinnati Convention. Under the mistaken belief that Mr. Buchanan would be defeated for the nomination—an impression created on the principles of the wish being father to the thought, they loudly proclaimed their admiration for this distinguished statesman, and declared that he was the only man the Democracy could certainly elect. Now, however, their tune is suddenly changed, and a great difference is manifested in the conversation of these gentlemen at the street corners. They have discovered that they were slightly previous in their zeal for Mr. Buchanan. Their idea that the South could not do justice to a man of his independence has been exploded, and they now find themselves in the very awkward predicament of being compelled to oppose and traduce a gentleman whom two weeks ago they were lauding to the skies as an able, honest and accomplished statesman. But there were others, and their name is legion, who formerly opposed the Democratic party, who were looking with far different feelings to the result of the National Convention. They are men who always had at heart the true interests of the country, and they anxiously awaited the decision of the Convention, resolved if James Buchanan should be the nominee, to give him their cordial support. They have known him long and well, as a neighbor and friend, and they know him to be in all respects worthy their suffrages. Disgusted with the corruptions of the Know-Nothing party—unwilling to join in the hue and cry against the south, with sectional fanaticism, they have come to the manly resolve to cast their votes for the Democratic ticket, at least until such times as its opponents unite in a uniform policy consistent with self-respect, and the perpetuity of our republican government.—Lat. Intelligencer.

COLONEL RICHARDSON.—The Colonel is a bold, rough, kind-hearted, and sensible man. At the battle of Buena Vista he was in command of a regiment, and fought like a tiger all day and nearly all night. He chews tobacco, and when excited he is not particular what becomes of the juice. He had fought, swore, sweat, and spit some twenty-four hours without eating or sleeping, and becoming exhausted, lay down on the ground, with his head upon his saddle, to take a little rest. About daylight the Mexicans began to ramose, when a sergeant ran to Richardson to acquaint him with the fact. He found him fast asleep, his head had got over the saddle, his shirt was wet with blood, sweat, and tobacco spit. He nudged him with his gun, and told him it was morning and the Mexicans were leaving. Richardson rubbed his eyes, and rolled a huge quid from his mouth, saying, "By G—d, I wish they had left yesterday morning."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Spain, Mexico and the United States.
The difficulty between Spain and Mexico is said to be serious, but we scarcely credit it. The amount claimed by Spain as losses incurred by Spanish subjects during the struggle of Mexico for independence is six millions. Mexico has called for a revision of these claims, urging that some of them are fraudulent. Spain refused this demand, and Mexico endeavored to enforce it by compelling the complainants to deposit their titles with available security for the amounts already paid thereon, threatening to confiscate the property of the Spanish holders should they refuse to do so, and actually carrying out the threat in several instances. This is resented by Spain, and a squadron has been sent to Vera Cruz to back its complaints. The task to be executed by this squadron, embracing nine or ten vessels, comprising in all one hundred and sixty guns, is variously stated. By some a bombardment of Vera Cruz is predicted, whilst others assert a blockade only will be attempted. A new Spanish Minister accompanies the squadron, which left Havana on the 23d ult.

LATER.
By the Isabel at Charleston, we have two days later news from Havana. The British W. I. mail steamer Tyne, Valen, commander, had arrived from Vera Cruz. She reports that the President of the Republic of Mexico hesitates to recognize the Spanish Minister, who comes with such formidable war trappings in his train—and that he would not do so, until the Spanish vessels of war left the port of Vera Cruz.
A telegraphic despatch from Washington to the New York Tribune, says that intelligence from Mexico indicates the existence of there of a feeling of alarm on the part of the government respecting the Spanish expedition, and foreshadows an application for protection from the United States.

Some of the Know Nothing papers are claiming Texas for the Bat and Owl ticket. It was only a few days ago that the leading Know Nothing paper in that State consented to hoist the names of Fillmore and Donelson. Texas will go Democratic by twenty thousand majority at the least calculation. Some of our best posted Texas exchanges don't think Fillmore will get more than 5,000 out of 80,000 votes in the State.

WHAT IS CANADA.—A correspondent writing from Toronto says:
"Large quantities of wheat are still in the hands of the Upper Canada farmers—probably not less than 5,000,000 bushels. They have not had the good sense to sell when prices were at the highest. The extent of land under crop is greater than at any previous time."

DIED.
At the residence of Mr. Thomas M. Ross in the Borough of Summitville on Wednesday evening the 18th inst. Miss Amanda Thornberg in the 20th year of her age.
But a short time since she was in the full vigor of health, but attacked by disease, after a short and severe illness now lies in the silent tomb. Possessing an amiable disposition, and beloved by all who knew her, she was followed to the grave on the following day by a large train of sorrowing friends.
