Buchanan and Breckinridge.

The Washington correspondent of the "Puritan Recorder," writes thus of the Democratic

' James Buchanan seems to be their chosen man, a bachelor of sixty-five, not mixed up termined resolution, and with signal success. He has good habits, a clear head, a steady firmness of mind, large experience, and a high and impartial spirit. He is a Presbyterian, denominationally, and a regular church-goer, kind to ministers, and a firm believer in the necessity of religion as the conservative element in the presperity of the republic. John C. Breckinridge is a young man, of a noted Presbyterian family of Kentucky; a grandson of a former attorney general of the United States, and the nephew of three Presbyterian ministers, a member of the last Congress of Mr. Clay's district. voted for by many Whigs. He has lately obtained the constitutional age (35) for the office of Vice President, to which he has been nominated He is no office seeker, but a man of excellent dignity, strong domesites. He would even adorn the Presidential hand chair. It is a good sign, amid all the threatening ones of the times, that a great excited political convention should so cordially select two such men for the first offices of the nation. Calumny will find little to feed on in the characters of these men.

Fremont and California.

There is no doubt that Fremont is one of the most unpopular men in California. He represented that State in the United States Senate just one session, and his only exploit was to introduce a bill providing for the sale of all the mineral lands by the government. - last eight head of Cattle, viz: 3 This would have cut every miner out of his claim. The whole mining interest of California was up in arms about it, and Fremont dared not even attempt to secure a re-election to the Senate. The bill that he introduced them away or they will be disposed of according them away or they will be disposed of according fell still born. That is the sum total of Fre- to law. mont's statesmanship. What is his chance for the electoral vote of California? He does not even reside there now .- Pitte, Post,
