THE SONG OF THE CAMP. BY DAYARD TAYLOR,

"Give us a song!" the soldier cried, The outer trenches guarding, When the heated guns of the camp allied Grew weary of bombarding.

The dark Redan, in silent scoff, Lay, grim and threatening, under; And the tawny mound of the Malakoff No longer belched its thunder,

There was a geard. One guardsmen said, "We storm the forts to-morrow; Sing while we may, another day Will bring enough of sorrow."

They lay along the battery's side, Below the smoking cannon-Brave hearts from Severn and from Clyde, And from the banks of Shannon.

They sang of love, and not of fame; Forgot was Briton's glory, Each heart recalled a different name, But all sang "Annie Laurie," Voice after voice caught up the song, Until the tender passion Rose like an anthem rich and strong-Their battle eve confession.

Dear girl, her name he dared not speak, Yet as the song grew louder, Something upon the soldier's cheek, Washed off the stain of powder.

Beyond the darkening ocean burned The bloody sunset's embers, While the Crimean valleys learned How English love remembers.

And once again a fire of helt Rained from the Russian quarters, With screams of shot and bursts of shell, And bellowing of the mortars.

And Irish Nora's eyes are dim For a singer dumb and gery; And English Mary mourns for him Who sarg of "Annie Laurie."

Ah, soldier! to your honored rest, Your truth and valor bearing: The bravest are the tenderest-The loving are the daring.

Nationality of the Democratic Party. The Boston Courier has the following judgment on the Democratic party: "The Democratic party still retains the semblance of a national party, but it is the semblance unly." This is a heavy accusation against the Dem ocratic party. It would have been more tangible and satisfactory had the Courier defined what it regards as the "semblance of a national party" which, the democracy still retains. Also what the reality was which, by implication, it admits the democratic party once had which made it a national party; and when, and in what way, it parted with so vital an element. But we deny the justness of the accusation and the soundness of the judgment. A party can be said to be national only when its issues, its principles and its measures, its organization and objects, are as comprehensive as our country. Such a party will have common interests and purposes that will attract atherents in every State and every locality. Now all this is characteristic of the democratic party. It gathers, periodieally, from all parts of the country, in a grand national council hall; and this representative body is the authoritative expounder of its creed. Such a body made the Cincinnati platform. This, surely, in $856, was no sham or "semblance;" it was reality-so regarded by friend or foc. Is it less reality today? Did not the Democracy of Missouri and North Carolina and Kentucky stand on this platform and gallantly meet their oppenents? Was it not by this sign that they conquered? Look now at the North. The noble democratic state convention of Ohiothe zealous democracy of Maine-the gathering hosts of other free states, are all planting themselves on this national platform. They consider themselves as members of a great national party. Now go to these States and say to their Democracy, you have the "semblance" only of a national party-you have lost the reality, and the reply would be like-

Again: the vote that placed President Buchanan in office, came from every State and every locality in the Union. There was no semblance here surely. A national party and none other did the work. Now, when, pray, was the party denationalized? By whom was the deed done? Is it meant to be understood that the measures of President Buchanan are | Fine Silver do., not national?
