"God help the poor. Let any one look at so fearful an instance of want as this, and think of his own mother being reduced to such a pass, and a pang will enter his heart, giving purity and strength to the prayer. God help the poor! He is their main, if Lot their only help. Strange we can organize all sorts of institutions, and carry them into successful operation while our charities are so ciumsily arranged that they generally fail of their object entirely, or fall on unworthy subjects; yet generally, we are charitably inclined. There is no one among us, whatever may be his unceasing pursuit of money but feels it a duty-nay, more, finds it contributes to his happiness-to reliane the needy and unfortunate; yet we fail miserably of our purpose. The wretched are around us, suffering fearfully; while the deceitful and wicked too often enjoy the few benefits we bestow."

Rules for the Journey of Life

The following rules, from papers of Dr. West, were, he says; thrown together as general waymarks on his journey of life:

Never ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem as such, however absurd they may appear to you to be.

Never show levity, whilst people are professedly eugaged in worship. Never resent a supposed injury till you know the views and motives of the author of it. Never on any occasion, to retaliate. Always take the part of an absent person. who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow. Never to think the worse of another on account of his differing with me in political and religious opinions. Not to dispute with a man more than seventy years of age, nor with a woman, nor an enthusiast.

Not to affect to be witty, or to jest so as to wound the feelings of another. To say as little as possible of myself and those who are near me. To aim at cheerfulness without levity. Not to obtrude my advice unasked.

Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanity or their vice.
