I am greatly in favor of spreading and plowing in manure upon ground which as to be planted in corn or potatoes, instead of placing it in the hill for several good reasons.

I would not place the manure in hills, because its effects are of small value to the crop of corn or potatoes. What possible benefit can a shovelful or two of unfurmented yard or stable manure do a hill of corn? Twothirds of the farmers use the manure made in winter; for application to their fields in the Spring. It is nothing more or less than green manure. If the weather, after planting should prove wet, it will be one chance in a hundred if the seed does not rot-corn especially. If the weather is dry, the manure dries into a solid mass, and is more of an intury than a benefit. Should the season be just night, the roots of corn soon grow be. youd the effects of the manure, and leave it useless at the bottom of the stalks, where it can be of no use until the field is plowed Trure is used, applying in the hill will do very well. Yes its effects are too contracted, and the full force of the manure is lost to the

I am not in favor of manureing potatoes in the hill under any consideration, as I believe it more of an injury than otherwise. I have always seen the best potatoes raised upon ground well manured for some other crop the previous year, especially late years, when there is danger of the rot.

My reasons for spreading and plowing in the manure are, because it is where it can benefit the crop during the whole period of its growth. It is fixed with the soil, and within reach of the roots of the plant along its whole length. where it must be of more value to the plant than when placed in the hill. It is possible for the manure, when placed in the hill, to influence the growth of the crop beyond the first commencement; and although an early start in Spring is very beneficial, yet would not that hill outgrow and out-yield, which could obtain a rich supply of nourishment for its plants during the whole season, instead of the one which had a full supply during its early growth, but was stinted all the rest of the season, as corn and potatoes must be when dependence is made upon applying manure in the hill alone?-Genesce Farmer.

Cheap Hot-Beds.

The time is pretty near at hand for this work again. How many there are who neg lect this useful adjunct to a country home "Too far away from town -can't get glass," Very well; here is something cheap enough and easy enough, yet it will do, we feel very certain It is from a correspondent of the Valley Farmer: "My frames are about six feet wide, by two wedths of domestic canvass will cover it, which are sewed together. Have cross ties on top, just the same as for glass—say every four feet, one cross-tie-to hold the frame secure and keep up the canvass, which is tacked to one by three stads the length of the frames, the same being a little wider than the frames, and allowed to hang over all around. I wished to enlarge my forcing-beds last winter, and happened to try canvass I prefer it to giass, being cheaper and easier to handle, and does not break so readily, I shall still enlarge this winter. I did commence my beds last season about the last of February; but this year I commenced in January. and I believe, by letting the air out at the top, I can start just as early as I could with glass, and have my plants as hardy, and with less attention, than to have glass. I put the oil on the domestic cold; perhaps it would be better to put it on warm. I will try it this season, as I think it will go further, than cold will do. I used linseed oil, and put it on with a paint brush."

Facts About Cows.

"The late Rev. Henry Coleman once stated that there was no subject that would tempt people to lie like cows. Surely a clergyman with a natural taste for farmers and farming ought to know about it, but we have been of the opinion that there is a difference in the profit of cows, ever since our mother made and sold fourteen pounds of butter in a week from a single cow. A part of the incredulity | Peter Parley, Hawthorne, Alice Carey and othin cows arises from the variableness of their products. Because a cow gives a large yield the first month after calving, it does not follow that she should do the same thing the rest of the year. Cows wax and wane like vegetation. There is only one noon in a day We had a neighbor that had an extraordinary cow one year, for which he was offered a hundred dollars. The next year the same cow was fatened and sold to the butcher. Remarkable cows often fail suddenly. Overfeeding, or a swolen udder, or the horn distemper, are prominent among the injuries to which cows are liable. A table spoonful of linseed oil poured into the ear at intervals will it is said cure the horn distemper.

THE RESTORATIVE OF PROF. O. J. WOOD for restoring hair perfectly and permanently has never yet had a rival, volume after volume might be given from all parts of the world, and from the most intelligent, to prove that it is a perfect Restorative, but read the circular and you cannot doubt; read also the following:

By The Hair.—People have for centuries been afflicted with bald heads, and the only remedy, heretofore known, has been those abominable wigs. By a recent discovery of Professor Wood, these articles are being fast disposed with but a great many persons still patronize them, because they have been so often imposed upon by Hair Tonics of defferent kinds. To all such persons, we earnestly make the request, that they will try once again, for in Wood's Restorative there is no such thing as fail. We know of a lady who was bald, who used the article a short time, and her head is now covered completely with the tiniest and most beatitiful curls imaginable. We know of numerous cases where hair was rapidly falling out, which it restored to greater perfection than it ever had been before. It is also without doubt one of the best articles for keeping the hair in good condition, making it soft and glossy, removing dandruff, and has proved itself the greatest enemy to all the ills that hair is heir to.
