How to Oil Harness.

In order to oil harness properly, unbuckle and separate every strap, then wash it in warm soap suds. The warmth will a little exceed that of new milk—if approaching hot, it will injure the leather. The soap suds should be used rapidly, and only enough to remove the crust which has formed on the harness by dust settling on the previous oiling. If the application is longer continued, it will abstract too much oil from the leather. Carriage harness, to look well, should then be blackened, and afterwards oiled. A correspondent of the New England "Farmer," recommends the following as the best blacking he has tried:—One ounce of extract of logwood, twelve grains of bicarbonate of potash, both pounded fine, and then two quarts of hot water added and stirred until all is dissolved. It is kept in a bottle.—This he says is much better than coppers, which cuts into the leather. He first applies neat's foot oil, and afterwards, the same with one-third castor oil, which enables the leather to withstand the effects of rain and exposure than otherwise. It should not be forgotten that such parts of the harness as are worn and need most should have the most oil, which may be given by a second application.

Cure for Sun-Stroke.

A correspondent of the American Agriculturist says: "Franklin bottled up lightning, but I can tell some folks how to keep sun-strokes in a bottle or jug where they won't them. Let them just tie the cork of their whiskey jug down tight, and as long as the string holds they won't be in much danger. If you put a man between two fires it's a wonder he does not get burnt; so when the fiery sun is on the outside and the fiery water on the inside, he is in great danger."

Milking in Silence.

At the Farmer's Club, at West Cornwall, Connecticut, one of the members observed that no talking should be allowed while milking is going on. Another said he had discharged a man because he would talk and interrupt the milking in his dairy, and that in three days the increase of milk was equal to the man's wages.

Why Horses Bite their Cribbs.

This question seems very sensibly answered by A. S. Hall, of Malden, Mass., in the N. E. Farmer, and we give the substance of his reasoning on the subject:—

Cols are raised in the country, and live more than half of the year in pasture; when old enough to work, they are usually much confined, and especially so when brought to the city; they are abused for their natural life of grazing, rolling and stretching at length on the ground to rest—and as the Hebrews longed for the feshpots of Egypt, so they hunger for their old pastures in the country; and in their longings gnaw their cribbs and every sleigh and wagon back their chest next to.

Cure for Fistula or Poll Evil.

Procure a handful of Poke roots, put in one gallon of water, and boil till the strength is out—after which, boil down the liquid to one quart. Then add half pint spirits turpentine and half pint oil of spike, and simmer away to a quart. Add 4 oz. blue vitriol, and it is ready for use. Wash the sore with soap suds, and when dry, apply the ointment once a day.

Cure for Horn-Ail, or Hollow Horn.

If the hair on the end of the tail is rolls or curls, cut off one inch of the tail. Then turn the animal's head on one side, and pour boiling water upon the lower horn till the dodges, and then take the other horn. By this time the animal will sweat, and three or four ounces of mustard seed ground should be given in some kind of feed.

SEEDS that may yet be sown, to secure a crop under ordinary circumstances, are corn, bush beans, lettuce, radishes, spinach, ruta bagas, turnips, celery, and late crop of peas. All this is worthy of consideration—first, from the view of having a variety of fresh vegetables; and second, because from various causes, some of the crops will fail.—Country Gent

To Keep Worms out of Dried Fruit

It is said that a small quantity of sassafras bark mixed with dried fruit will keep free from worms for years. The remedy is easily obtained in many localities, and is well worthy an experiment, as it will injure the fruit in any manner, if it does not prevent the nuisance.

Wash for Wounds, Corks or Collar Galls.

1 oz. white vitriol, 1 oz. copperas, 1 table spoonful gun-powder, 1 qt. soft water. After washing the parts with soft hot water, and wiping dry, apply the above wash with sponge or cloth.

Outlet Plants—Don't forget to thin these out.

Now is the time to set about it. Give each plant at least six inches to grow in.—This is one of those vegetables that will pay for a little larger growth than is mostly to be met with.

To Remove Films from the Eyes of Cattle.

I have never found a surer remedy than finely pulverized earth, occasionally blown into the eye through a quill.
