IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE. Arrival of the Arabia. THE GOODWOOD CUP RACE. SACKVILLE, N. B., August 10.—The horse express having arrived from Halifax with the European despatches by the Arabia for the Associated Press...

The Emperor Napoleon has decided that the French army and navy shall be restored to a peace footing without the least possible delay. He is now generally regarded as sincere, and his intentions pacific.

The English Cabinet has announced that the invitation to participate in the Congress of the Great Powers would not be accepted until the result of the Conference at Zurich has been ascertained.

The steamships Vanderbilt, City of Baltimore and Bavaria have arrived out. The debates in the English Parliament indicate the intention of the Government to vigorously prosecute the works upon the national defenses.

The American horse Starke, entered by Mr. Ten Broeck for the Goodwood Cup, had carried off by promised land. The American Independence Blye says that the Austrian provincial councils will all be convoked soon, and will have complete liberty in their deliberations...

The first Austrian corps d'armee will be maintained in Italy for the present on a war footing, two hundred thousand strong. The other corps d'armee are to their former cantonments in Galicia and Hungary.

The official Piedmontese Gazette says that the new ministry will not propose any serious variation in the policy of Sardinia. There will be a grand illumination at Milan on the arrival of the King.

The Sardinian governors of Modena have been withdrawn and the governments turned over to the municipality. The result of the deliberations of the annexations of Tuscany had been made known at one hundred and forty-one places, including Leghorn and Florence...

Le Nord desires that the French troops are to remain in the duchies. A Milan letter says that the extreme party in commencing agitation and insurrection in Venice, if possible.

The Invidious Resse says that Austria and France may make whatever treatise they please, but in fixing the lot of Italy they are bound to ask the concurrence of the rest of Europe.

It is said that a deputation, with Prince Napoleon at its head, will soon reach Vienna to take the remains of the Duc de Reichstadt to France.

The date for the Zurich conference was not fixed, but it was expected to meet in a few days. Count Colorado, the representative of Austria reached the Mercies, on the 27th, and it is said proceed direct for Zurich.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The Parliamentary proceedings of the 27th were unimportant. On the 28th, the House of Commons Lord C. Paget said that experiments were progressing to test the practicability of laying a submarine telegraph to Gibraltar.

Lord John Russell made his statement relative to foreign affairs. He would have postponed it if there had been any prospect of being able to pronounce a definite settlement of the affairs of the continent before the approaching close of the session.

He was glad to see in the Monitor, that the Emperor of France had determined to place the army and navy on a peace footing. After reviewing the grounds of peace as proclaimed by the two Emperors, he said that as England did not think it was for her to interfere in the peace, the sacrifice of a province by Austria did not effect the state of affairs of Europe sufficient to warrant the interference of the neutral powers.

The most important part of the treaty, however, related to the future of Italy, and the invitation of the Emperor Napoleon to England to enter the Congress, was to consult on the actual affairs of Italy, quite irrespective to the terms of the treaty of Villafranca, England had not consented to join the Congress, and could not until they saw the result of the conference at Zurich.

The Villafranca did not lay down absolutely any Italian confederation, but only that the Emperors would unite to promote one. He doubted the feasibility or the benefit of a confederation at present, and pointed out the various obstacles to the consummation of such a project. Again, England must know how it was proposed to carry out the treaty before joining the Congress, especially with respect to the restoration of the Dukes of Tuscany and Modena, as England could never be a party to forcing them on their people without their free consent.

He rejoiced to say that the King of Naples was beginning to put an end to the system which prevailed under the late King, and seriously desired to terminate altogether.

There was a treaty about to be made at Vienna, whether a confidential agent of the French government had gone to arrange the basis. He could not now say whether there would be a Congress, but he thought it would not become England now to say that she would withdraw from such an assembly, if there was a chance of promoting the peace of Europe.

Mr. Disraeli expressed the wish that Lord John Russell had been more explicit, particularly as to any terms that may have been offered Austria by the neutral powers. He reiterated his object to England having anything to do with the conference, as she would thereby be bound by the treaty of Villafranca.

Lord Palmerston denied that England had submitted any terms to Austria which were less favorable than those obtained from France. The Government, at the request of the French Ambassador, had consented to be the channel of communication, and had submitted some terms to Austria, but at the same time distinctly stating that they were the views of the French Government, and that England gave no advice or opinion in the matter.

It would be impossible for the Government to join in the Congress until the result of the Zurich conference is known. Mr. Whiteside said that the Government had been made a cats-paw of, and by transmitting terms to Austria virtually asserted to them.

Mr. Gladstone eulogized on the conduct of Sardinia, and defended Lord Palmerston from the misrepresentations brought against him, and besought the House not to interfere between the executive, in whatever measures it might find itself able to adopt for the interest of Italy, and the permanent welfare of Europe.

After speeches by other members, the subject was then dropped. On the 29th, the proceedings of the House of Lords, sundry questions were put to the Government, on the subject of naval armaments and National defenses. Lord Palmerston said that he did not think it possible for England to enter into any agreements with the other powers, for the armaments reductions for her military and naval establishments, her position totally different. Mr. Horsman moved a resolution that the expenses of completing the works of defense, be met by a fund specially provided for the purpose, independent of parliamentary votes. He urged continued armaments and suggested a loan to complete the defenses. Mr. Sidney Herbert and Lord Palmerston objected to the proposition, but both said that the Government was fully alive as to the importance of completing the defenses of the country, and promised vigorous action in the matter. Mr. Cobden depreciated his unnatural alarm as an actual incentive to war, and ridiculed the idea of invasion by France.

He hoped that explanations would be entered into between the two Governments. After such explanations had been made and tried, he would, if necessary, be ready to vote £200,000,000, to provide a navy superior to France, although he showed that the English navy was greatly superior now. Those of our readers who are acquainted with James Rooney, the School Master, know that although a man of few words, he is emphatically a man of figures, and the best Mathematician in the County. It is certainly to be regretted that he has selected an obscure portion of Blacklick township for his residence, where it is impossible for his light to shine before men. The following "question" which he forwarded us through the mail last week, shows that he is still not only engaged in cultivating his favorite science, but that he has also recently been engaged in courting the muses. We hope he may be a successful wooer, and that ere long he will be recognized by the "rest of mankind" as a Mathematical and poetical profligate. If any of our Schoolmaster friends can "cyprier" out the following, they will please "drop us a line": For the "Democrat & Sentinel." In Ebensburg I chanced with a Cooper to sit. Whose trumpet ran a great deal too fast for his. So I asked him to make me a true oval tub. The longer and shorter diameters be. In just such proportion as five is to three. Eighteen inches the depth I proposed and no more. And content in wine gallons 5 less than 3 score. He promised to solve it, and straight to work went. But when he had measured it lacked the content. He tried it again, but too large he then made it. Tho' it held the content, the diameter failed it. Thus making it often too large and too small. The Connecticut Cooper in a passion did fall. But declared he would make his said promise prove good. Or else he'd work up every stave of his wood. Now you Ebensburg scholars, pray please find him out. The diameter's length, he'll ne'er do it I doubt. Blacklick tp. J. R.

An old darkey went out cat-fishing, hooked a pike, which he threw back into the water. Upon being asked why he did so, he replied, "I come a cating, and when I goes a cating, I wants catfish, not pike."

"Mother," said a little boy the other day, "why are orphans the happiest children on earth?" "They are not my child, Why do you ask the question?" "Because they have no mothers to spank 'em."

The Kansas Constitutional Convention has decided that women shall have the same control and management as men in school matters. The vote stood twenty eight for and twenty-one against the matter.

It is remarked, as an evidence of the yet unsettled state of Italy, that since the Spanish war of succession (1701) Austria has lost and regained Lombardy no fewer than twelve times.
