

WINTERING FARM STOCK—HORSES.

The care of his domestic animals is among the first in importance and the continuity of the winter labor of the farmer. He must be "on hand," early and late, in the stable and stock-yard—horses, sheep, swine and poultry look to him for food and protection. A considerable portion of the warmer season is employed in preparing their winter sustenance—in cultivating and harvesting a supply of food against the inclemency of winter. The one is a season of ingathering; the other of scattering abroad; youthful summer boards, that aged winter may consume, and it is thus in all the varied concerns of life, if wisely ordered. The latter season is now upon the farmer—the supply gathered with so much care and labor, must now be given out to his dependants, from day to day, and from hour to hour, as their necessities require. A wise economy in the care of stock is of the first importance, for the thrift of the animal and its consequent profits are best studied when comfort is cared for by a just attention to every want, in a timely, liberal, and yet not wasteful manner.

We propose to offer hints bearing on this subject—timely hints—reminders of the neglectful—instructors of the ignorant, (but how few there are who do not know far better than they do for their stock.) and shall commence with that usually first brought to the barn—the horse.

The horse is one of the most valuable servants of the farmer. His health and comfort consequent ability to labor, are worthy of particular attention. Good stables, warm, but light and well ventilated go far to promote this end. Proper care and cleanliness, and regularity in feeding, are also necessary. Hay and oats are the best and most readily available food for the horse, and are mainly depended upon for this purpose. Other grains and fodder, also roots and fruits, may sometimes be employed to advantage. Straw, cut or chopped, and meal of rye, corn or barley, or a mixture of these, wet and mixed with straw, are frequently used with fair results. They furnish a cheaper food for horses when hay is very costly, in proportion to grains, as is sometimes the case. Carrots are the best roots for horse feed, and are thought to be of great service promoting the health and keeping up the appetite. Potatoes and turnips are sometimes used, but they should first be cooked, and then fed rather than to strengthen a horse. Apples are readily eaten, and those who have given them to their horses speak favorably of their effects.

As a steady food for the horse, hay and oats are the best, unless particular care with other feeds is given to their feeding and management by one skilled in the business. To those who employ hay and oats, we would commend an occasional change from oats to carrots, apples, etc., as such will be relished by the animal, and promote his health and power to labor. Instead of grain twice or three times a day, give one feeding of them, and try sometimes a feed of cut hay or straw and meal, for animals like to change from one kind of food to another as well as human beings.

Regularly in the hours of labor, of feeding and rest, are always desirable. Plenty of pure water should be supplied at least twice a day, and it would be of service to the horse could be brought to a lower temperature than merely below the freezing point. When brought in from work, warm with exertion, the horse should be rubbed down and then blanketed, but we would not blanket a horse in a good stable, as a general rule, except in extremely cold weather. When standing out of doors while in harness, harness should be blanketed, and given a place sheltered from the wind, if possible; many horses are raised from negligence in this respect.

In the care of horses, a few farther points may be listed upon. A sharp-toothed carry comb is the dread of a one-skinned horse, and the brush and straw wisp will answer the same purpose much better, if used as frequently as they should be. Mud should never be suffered to dry upon the legs of a horse, it is the cause of half the swelled legs, scratches and other afflictions of the feet, with which they are afflicted. Want of air, light and cleanliness; poor hay or insufficient or indigestible food, are all fruitful sources of disease—and a proper attention to these points will be of far greater service in restoring and keeping up health and vigor, than the thousand and one medical nostrums so often relied upon. Proportion the food, in amount and character, to the nature of the service required, and your team will not fail you, but will keep in uniform order, and be ready in the spring for the steady work then called for, and so important to the prosperity of the farmer. These hints are intended to apply mainly to working horses—to those kept upon the farm for the ordinary purposes of the same. Cattle and horses not in use, will not require the same amount of care, but their comfort and thrift should receive careful attention, as their future value depends largely upon the foundation now laid.—Country Gentleman.

DR. MORSE'S INDIAN ROOT PILLS

ALSO we present you with a liberos of DR. MORSE—the inventor of MORSE'S INDIAN ROOT PILLS. This philanthropist has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited Europe, Asia, and Africa, as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were first discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arise from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD—that our strength, health and life depended upon this vital fluid. When the various passages become clogged, and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action, becomes thick, corrupted, and diseased; thus causing all pains, sickness and distress of every name; our strength is exhausted, our health we are deprived of, and if nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become thickened and cease to act, and thus our life will be forever lost. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how pleasant to us that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountainous cliffs in Nature's Garden, in a scorching hot climate, and in the most fertile soil. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how pleasant to us that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountainous cliffs in Nature's Garden, in a scorching hot climate, and in the most fertile soil.
