

BOYCOTTING

Pasturing on the Highways. We cannot conceive of a greater means than turning cattle on the highways to pasture. The true spirit of the law in relation to fencing is, 'That every owner should keep his cattle from trespassing on his neighbor's land, and not, as many suppose, that he should fence his grounds to keep his neighbor's cattle from his fields. No farmer can, constitutionally be required to erect fences, and if he chooses to soil his cattle in stables or pens, he should not be required to fence his farm at all. In many parts of Europe fences are not used, and in this enlightened age they should not be required in this country. The cost of useless fences is greater per mouth, than the total expenses of our government per year, and why? simply because the close fenced portion of the community, who have progressed sufficiently to adopt the best methods for feeding their cattle, prefer to tax their neighbors for half the cost of fences, only required by their refusal to adopt the soiling system. Such as desire to continue the open pasturing, should be compelled to make the entire fence they require, and not anchor their neighbors to their stupidity. Every animal found on the public ground and its owner should be fined. The excuse sometimes made, that poor men should be permitted to pasture their cattle on the road, is frivolous; it would be equally proper to claim, that poor men should be permitted to use the legislative halls for residences.—Working Farmer.

The Color of Flowers Promoted by Charcoal.

A French amateur, in the Paris Horticultural Review, states: 'About a year ago, I made a bargain for a rosebud of magnificent growth, and full of buds. I waited for them to bloom, and expected roses worthy of such a noble plant, and of the praise bestowed upon it by the venter. At length, when it bloomed, all my hopes were blasted. The flowers were of a faded color, and I discovered that I had only a middling multiflora, slate-colored enough. I therefore resolved to sacrifice it to some experiments which I had in view. My attention had been captivated with the effects of charcoal, as stated in some English publications. I then covered the earth (in the pot in which my rosebud was) about half an inch deep with pulverized charcoal. Some days after, I was astonished to see the roses which bloomed as fine a lively rose color as I could wish. I determined to repeat the experiment, and, therefore, when the rosebud had done flowering, I took off the charcoal and put fresh earth on the pot. You may conceive that I waited for the next spring impatiently to see the result of this experiment. When it bloomed, the roses were, as at first, pale and discolored; but by applying the charcoal as before, they soon resumed their rosy red color. I tried the powdered charcoal in large quantities on my petunias, and found that both the white and the violet flowers were equally sensible to its action. It always gave great vigor to the red or violet colors of the flowers, and the white petunias became veined with red or violet tints. The violets (colors) became covered with irregular spots of a bluish or almost black tint. Many persons who admired them thought they were new varieties from seed. Yellow flowers are, as I have proved, insensible to the influence of the charcoal.—Cottage Gardener.

The Depth of Trees.

There has recently sprung up some controversy as to the proper depth that trees should be transplanted, and as is usual in controversies of this kind among practical men, there is not the least hope of their ever coming to a common opinion on the question. And this is natural and perhaps as it should be. Different kinds of trees frequently require different modes of culture, beginning with the planting. For instance, dwarf pears should be planted deep. A fir or spruce should be planted shallow, and so, as a rule, should standard pear as well as apple trees. This exception should, however, be made, in light, porous soils they may be gauded deeper than in clay moulds. Thus the heavier the soils, the shallower should the trees be planted. Such is our experience.—Germantown Telegraph.

Remedy for a Felon.—We find the following in the Auburn Daily News: A lady who had been troubled for some time with a felon on her finger, gives a simple remedy from which she experienced great relief, and which enabled her to obtain sleep for the first time in many nights. It was to cut a hole in a lemon and wear it on the finger like a thimble—the felon being encased in the fruit.

The Growing Wheat Crop.—The accounts furnished by newspapers in regard to the prospects of the growing wheat crop in the chief "granary" of the Northwest are exceedingly favorable, so that unless the season between now and harvest should prove remarkably unpropitious, and affect a wide extent of territory, a large yield will be realized. In Wisconsin where farmers have been discouraged in their efforts to grow winter wheat, unusual effort is making to get in large crops of spring wheat. In the Southern States, judging from present indications, the wheat crop will yield a fair average, for while there are occasional instances of it at promise, complaints of bad weather have, till lately, been very frequent. From Virginia the accounts are very conflicting.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

It is a fact that, at some period, every member of the human family is subject to disease or disturbance of the bodily functions; and with the aid of a good tonic and the exercise of plain common sense, they may be able to regulate the system so as to secure permanent health. In order to accomplish this desirable object, the true course to pursue is certainly that which will produce a natural state of things at the least hazard of vital strength and life. For this purpose, Dr. Hostetter has introduced to this country a preparation bearing his name, which is not a new medicine, but one that has been tried for years, giving satisfaction to all who have used it. The Bitters operate powerfully upon the stomach, bowels, and liver, restoring them to a healthy and vigorous action, and thus, by the simple process of strengthening nature, enable the system to triumph over disease.

For the cure of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Nausea, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, or any Bilious Complaints, arising from a morbid inaction of the Stomach or Bowels, producing Cramps, Dysentery, Colic, Cholera Morbus, &c., these Bitters have no equal. Diarrhoea, dysentery or flux, so generally contracted by new settlers, and caused principally by the change of water and diet, will be speedily regulated by a brief use of this preparation. Dyspepsia, a disease which is probably more prevalent in all its various forms, than any other, and the cause of which may always be attributed to derangements of the digestive organs, can be cured without fail, by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, as per directions on the bottle. For this disease every physician will recommend Bitters of some kind; then why not use an article known to be infallible? All nations have their Bitters, as a preventive of disease and strengthener of the system in general; and among them all there is not to be found a more healthy people than the Germans, from whom this preparation is derived, based upon scientific experiments which have tended to prove the value of this great preparation in the scale of medical science.

FEVER AND AGUE.—This trying and protracted disease, which fixes its relentless grasp on the body of man, reducing him to a mere shadow in a short time, and rendering him physically and mentally useless, can be driven from the body by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Further, none of the above-named diseases can be contracted, even in exposed situations, if the Bitters are used as per directions. And as they neither create nausea nor offend the palate, and render unnecessary any change of diet or interruption of ordinary pursuits, but promote sound sleep and healthy digestion, the complaint is removed as speedily as is consistent with the production of a thorough and permanent cure. For Persons of Advanced Years, who are suffering from an enfeebled constitution and infirm body, these Bitters are invaluable as a restorative of strength and vigor, and to only be tried in the case of the aged. And to the mother nursing these Bitters are indispensable, especially where the mother's nourishment is inadequate to the demands of the child, consequently her strength and health are here in a good measure, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is needed to impart temporary strength and vigor to the system. Ladies should by all means try this remedy for all cases of debility, and, in fact, for all ailments, and their physician, who, if he is acquainted with the virtue of the Bitters, will recommend their use in all cases of weakness.

CAUTION.—We caution the public against using any of the many imitations or counterfeits, but ask for Hostetter's CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS, and see that each bottle has the words "Dr. J. C. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters" blown on the side of the bottle, and stamped on the metallic cap covering the cork, and observe that our autograph signature is on the label. Prepared and sold by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa., and sold by all druggists, grocers, and dealers generally throughout the United States, Canada, South America, and Germany.
