Laura and Jenny Somers were the only children of a widower, who, although in moderate circumstances, moved in very fashionable society. At the period of my short sketch, he was about to supply the lamented Mrs. Somers' place, after nearly ten years of mourning, and although a kind, indulgent parent, had no objections to his daughter's marriage, and, indeed, had told them so. Laura whose high spirit resented the probable supremacy of a step mother, had already selected Godfrey Horton for her future husband, and Jenny, who was younger and gentler in spirit, tried to conquer a carefully concealed preference for the same person. All his attentions were ascribed by her to a brotherly regard, though every act of kindness and courtesy touched her very heart.

It was the morning after a large ball, and key the sisters were in the breakfast-room together. Laura, her glossy black hair pushed negligently over her face, with the rough tumbled braids of last evenings elaborate coiffure gathered losely into a comb, wearing a soiled wrapper, torn stockings, and presenting rather an alarming contrast to the brillians ballroom belle, was louging on a sofa. Jenny, in a neat morning dress, with a large gingham apron little white collar, and hair smooth ly brushed into a neat knot, was washing the

The old man bit his lip. 'Think,' said Jenny, in a low tone, 'if you

POLITICAL.

From the Washington "Constitution." Douglas's claim to regularity in the nomination without foundation-his bogus strength did not receive two-thirds, even including the bogus delegates.

The pretentions of the friends of Mr. Douglas that he is the regular nominee of the party have been urged with so much warmth and persistency as in certain quarters to have pro duced some effect on the public mind. There are loyal democrats who now even hesitate as been chagrined at the factitious and revolutionary course of the friends of Mr. Douglas in the Front Street Theatre Convention in ex cluding the regularly-accredited delegates of sovereign States, and admitting in their stead delegates representing not even a respectable minority or the party; democrats who disap-prove and denounce the one-man spurit of rule and ruin which, for the first time in our hisfairness; democrats who have seen the most atrocious and degrading means resorted to manufacture and misrepresent public sentiment, democrats who know that the great 'Not decided yet?' said Jenny, returning bulk of the office holders, all sorts of needy adventures, those who make politics a trade, and are influenced by the hope to secure the party rule and devoted to the Constitution of their country, are hesitating and pausing as to the path of duty. To such we address our-'Drudge! nonsense! I have plenty of time selves. His strength, increased by to democrats everywhere not to be deceived or "Shall I call again for the change?' said the votes of the bogus delegates from Ala-Massachusetts, never exceeded 172 votes; and

A most artful and deceptive game was play give adventitious strength to Mr. Douglas .-Before we proceed to annalize the vote, we beg to contrast with it the proceedings of the Maryland Institute The true democracy admitted no delegates except those legally and formully accredited from the democratic party of the several States; none whose credentials had not been presented and approved by the There is a doctor in the north western part | voice of the original Convention when it assembled in Charleston. That Convention admitted to seats the Dean Richmond delega tion from New York and rejected the Wood Ferando Wood delegates to seats. So in the case of Illinois. The united Convention at Charleston gave seats to the Douglas delegates and rejected the delegates headed by Isaac Cook. The Maryland Institute Convention refused seats to these latter delegates. There were gentlemen present who desired seats as representing Iowa. They were not admitted to seats, on the ground that they were not authorized to act in hehalf of the democratic party of Iowa in Convention assembled. This course in reference to seats. so honorable to the true democracy, so honorable to the friends of Breckenridge and Lane, demonstrates that a firm reliance was had in the justice and necessity of their course in instituting the Convention, and in presenting candidates and a platform worthy of the national democracy throughout the Union.

One hundred and five and a half bona-fide electoral votes were cast in the Maryland Institute Convention-cast by delegates admitted to seats at the Charleston Convention .-To which must be added the vote of South Carolina and of Delaware, which subsequently endorsed the action of the Convention; one half vote from Minesota-the case of a delegate who was not present in either Conventions, but who subsequently approved the acneither Conventions. The records shows that Advertiser. 2 votes in Connecticut, 3 votes in Kentucky. 31 votes in Pennsylvania, 41 votes in New Jersey, 2 vote in Maine, and 2 votes in Missouri, took no part in either convention, leaving but 170 bona fide votes in the entire convention; and, counting the bogus votes from Alabama and Lousiana, I bogus vote from Arkansas, & bogus in Massachusetts, and & bogus in Missouri, but 185 votes. titled to but 5 votes; they were allowed 10 votes. What right had the Minnesota delegates to cast the entire vote in the Convention, in face of the known fact that Becker, Edgerton and Fridley had withdrawn, refusing any longer to recognise the Convention; in face of the known fact that two of these gentlemen were actually present in the other Convention, through an authorized proxy, vindicating the fealty of Minnesota?

But the wicked and blind rejection of the delegates of sovereign States has already received the most withgring rebuke from the South. How have the bogus delegates from Alabama and Louisiana, who falsely claimed that they represented the democracy of these States, who voted for Mr. Douglas in Convention, and who guarantied the vote of their respective States for Douglas, been received by the gallant democrats of their respective States? What cry has come up from their plains, their valleys and their bill-sides, and whose banner is everywhere waving in the breeze? What say the democracy in their primary meetings, their mass assemblages, and through the press? One universal cry for equal rights, of defiance to wrong, of determination to stand erect, and one cry for Breckinridge and Lane. Nearly the entire press of every Southern State but Missouri, and especially of the States whose bogus delegates were put in the seats of honor by the Front Street Theatre Convention, have raised the flag of Breckinridge and Lane. Thus the hand of dissimulation and of wrong is stamped upon the Douglas Convention of the Front Street Theatre, and we find patriots all over this extended Union coming to the rescue of the democracy. At the North paper after paper is unfurling the flag of the invincible democracy. To rescue the Constitution from the spoiler, to defend the integrity of cur faith, and to vindicate the equal rights of the sovereign States, good tend these things. When I marry you may do it,' and she laughed merrily.

There was not in the Convention when he speed. We know they are clothed in the panoply of the invincible truth. We appeal seduced by a factitious plca of regularity into the support of candidates who cannot command a single electoral vote, and whose claims can only be pushed at the risk of the dismemberment of this glorious Union and the disas-trous wreck of the hopes of the friends of liberty throughout the world.
