A Defunct Politician. A large and spirited Democratic Meeting Stephen A. Douglas's ambition like that of M'Beth, has oe'rleapt itself. He once commanded in a remarkable degree, the confidence of the Democratic party. But by his course he has forfeited it and can never regain it. His course since the fail of 1857, received the first rebuke at Charleston; There every Democratic State, with two exceptions, refused to vote for him, and zealously opposed his nomination. The vote on the first ballot at Charleston rung his political death knell. Nearly all the Abolition and Black Republican States were in his favor and insisted on forcing him on the Democratic States. They said in effect, "Gentlemen of the Democratic States, we of the Abolition States, are determust elect him. We care nothing about your protests against the act." But even by their bullying and the ousting of legally elected delegates at Baltimore, they did not succeed in nominating him according to the established rules and usages of the party. If after this he had quietly retired to his home, he might have regained in some degree the confidence of the party. But instead of doing this, he immediately started on an electioneering tour, devoting his time to making stump speeches, begging votes, and misrepresenting lent order was preserved throughout.

the views of Mr. Breckinridge and his friends. This tour has injured him in the estimation of thinking men of all parties. It shows him to be a cold hearted and selfish politician, who is determined if possible to crush every object, even though it should be the Democratic party, which may stand in the way of his personal aggraudizement. His visit to Maine was followed by a disastrous defeat of the Democracy at the State election, and every

Several of the parties engaged in the affray, have been arrested and lodged in jail.

The Spirit of Black-Republicanism .

The black republican nominee for Governor of Massachusetts, to succeed Mr. Bauks, John A. Andrew, whose niggerism is such an intense description that even the more politic and timid of the blacks themselves are alarmed lest his nomination should damage their chances of success. Thus, the Springfield Republican whose own bitter radcalism is andoubted, complains that "his | the influence which it wields with the democ-(Andrew's) John Brown sympathies and racy of the State. Ever since the Baltimore speeches, his Garrisonian affiliations, his negro training predilections, and all that sort of extreme anti-slaveryism, with which his record abounds, will be trumpeted far and wide-in the State to injure him, out of it to harm Lincoln."

The vaticinations of this Massachusetts journal are correct; but why should they not be? The nomination of Audrew was a deliberate act on the part of the republican party of Massachusetts, and was, indeed made as a speech of the most violent abolitionist character by Mr. Senator Sumper. Mr. Summer was, in fact, the spokesman of the Convention; and, if its sentiments had not been defined with sufficient distinctness by the character of its nomination, Mr. Sumner's speech would have been the proper source As it is, that speech is useful to show that the nomination of Andrew was deliberate, and that the black-republican party intended to put him forward as the formal exponent of their principles.

Only a short time before the convention met Mr. Seward spoke at Boston, and said that the "irrepressible conflict was about to be ended by the destruction of slavery; and Mr. Sumner said before the convention itself and repeated it, that he sought to put into publicaus. operation "active measures" against it. We do not like to suppose that Mr. Seward contemplated the ending of the slavery conflict by such means as are now being employed in Texas, and which seem to threaten other States neither do we wish to believe that these are the "active measures" which Mr. Summer eulogized; and yet we cannot discover any meaning in the declaration of either gentleman less sanguinary than this. And if the convention of the party to which they belonged sympathised in the demand, for this kind of "active measures," as it appears they did, they naturally sought for a man, who, as governor of the State, would not object to the most radical and revolutionary means which it might be proposed to use against the South. The nomination illustrates the speech, and the speech the nomination. The one capable of desiring to employ on a grand scale the torch of the incendiary, the bludgeon of the assassin, and the lustful passions

The curtain is about to drop on the four first scenes of the drama. The last scene remains to be played. It is the most important of all, and will excite the interest of many who have thus far been indifferent spectators. The bold efforts of a disunion party, controlled by the men who counsel open resistance to the execution of the fugitive slave law and eulogize John Brown as a martyr in the cause of humanity, to get possession of our National Government, is well calculated to excite the alarm of all National men and Patriots. And nothing but united action on the part of the friends of the Union in the Northern States, will prevent them from being successful. The National men of our State will have it in their power to prevent the election of Lincoln & Hamlin, but in order to accomplish this, they must effect a thorough union at once. It will not do to neglect the work a single day after the present week.

The contest for local offices has been carried on in this County, during the campaign, with a degree of bitterness for which we can remember no parallell. Now that it is over, we hope that harmony and good feeling will fused to pledge tnemselves if elected to carry reign in our midst once more. But we do not look for this at once, for,

"Long, long after the storm is past.

Rolls the turbid and turbulent billows." Throughout, we fearlessly pursued the pathway to which duty pointed us, and we are ready to do so again. We are prepared to defend our course whenever it shall be assailed, but we hope the course of the "rule or ruin men" of our county, with whom we have been battling, will not be such hereafter as to render it necessary for us to allude to bygones.

for It seems that a one sided account of the "public discussion" between Daniel Mc-Glaughlin, Esq., and the Editor of this paper, which came off on Monday evening of last week in the Court House, is to appear in the columns of the Mountaineer this week. We made no allusion to the "discussion" last week, supposing, of course, that it would not be made the subject of newspaper controversy. It was quite natural for the Editor of the Mountaineer to assert that Mr. McGlau ghlin had the best of the discussion. But we

Union of the Party.

The wisdom for the plan of uniting the party adopted by the State Executive Committee at Cresson, is every day becoming more apparent. With the Democracy divided into two hostile factions, Lincoln would of course be certain of carrying this State without the slightest difficulty. The certainty of his doing so, would secure him success in the other States, such as Indiana, Illinois, California, &c., where he might otherwise be defeated. The saying that as "Pennsylvania goes, so goes the Union," is regarded as strictly true in every State of the Confederaey, and the certainty that our noble old Commonwealth would cast her vote for Lincoln & Hamlin, would, of course, elate and give confidence to her opponents; while it would proportionably cast down and discourage the Democracy who are battling in defence of the ful in assisting nature to expel the most ter-Union and Constitution.

Under these circumstances, it is apparent it a trial? that nothing but united action on the part of all National men in the State, can prevent the triumph of Sectionalism in next November .--The crisis is one which demands prompt, determined and energetic action. This is no time for crimnation and recrimnation. Let us all make sacrifice of our private feelings the delicate form of woman render her suband prejudices, in order to defeat sectionalism and save the Union. Andrew, by the republican party of Massachusetts, does not "barm Lincoln," it will be because the party which nominated him is, throughout the whole North, as badly abolitionized and John Brown-ized as it is in Massachusetts, and if that be the case, there is indeed an "irrepressible conflict" at hand, which, however, we are confident Heaven will not permit to end as Seward, Sumper, Andrew, and their fanatical supporters exultingly predict. They decided by a unanimous vote to have the hanging first, and proceeded with the trial. The evidence was conclusive that he had stolen the horses, and he was sentenced to be bung. The prisoner begged for merey; offered two thousand dollars, fifty head of cattle, and twenty horses to be released, promising to leave the country and never return. His offer was refused. The evidence is accumulating every day, and is most powerful and irresistible, going to show that Douglas, and a few of his personal adherents, are engaged in the work of disreputing and destroying the great National Democratic party to secure the triumph of Black Republicanism.
