Timber as a Protection to Crops. On this subject the Valley Farmer has the following: A correspondent in one of our exchange papers speaks of a piece of five acres of wheat in Delaware which grew alongside of a grove of timber; it made a good crop; there were seventy acres exposed to the full blast of the winter's wind, and the consequence was, it was hardly worth cutting. He also speaks of the effects of the protection of woods to orchards in Michigan. He says:

"Our orehards here did well when the country was new and the clearings were small But as our forests recede from the orchards, the bark on the west side of many a fine tree is killed by the piercing west wind. Some of our neighbors have very considerately preserved belts of timber, and clustures of shell bark, black walnut, and buuternut; while others, like time, have cut down all, and are now reaping the fruits of their folly instead of their orchards."

Our attention was called, some time ago, by one of the conductors on the Illinois Central Railroad, to an orchard near Chicago, which covered a number of acres. A part of the trees were large and prosperous, a part small and sainted. On the side of the field where the trees were fine it was evident that they owed their growth to the shelter of a belt of forest trees, which had been planted for their protection. Those nearest the belt were large and thrifty; others, a little further off, were smaller They diminished regularly, so far as the influence of the belt of timber was felt. Instances of this kind are common. The whole orchard diminished regularly in size, so far as the influence of the pro tection was felt Beyond that all were small. Instances of this kind are common in the neighborhood of groves.

All who have left standing the wild fruit trees they found in clearing up groves of timber, have noticed that they are less productive under the exposure. It does not follow however, that all protection is profitable. On the other hand, it has been shown to be positively injurious in some cases. Observation and experiment are needed to learn the true

How much are Carrots worth for Feeding.

This is a question needing to be answered. Carrots are raised more than formerly, but there is no well settled opinion as to their comparative value for feeding. Various theoretical statements has been published from time to time, by writers on farming, and those who are fond of calculating the value of food. But, for ourselves, we are still in doubt as to the real value of a bushel of carrots compared with other kinds of food costing the same price. Here is a case in point. (We, of course, have our opinion, but we wish to call out others)

During the past summer, notwitstanding the drouth, we raised half an acre of very fine carrots on ground trenched two feet deep last spring. We tried to market them in the city but could not get an offer that would net over 75 cents a barrel, or 30 cents a bushel, so we kept them and are now using them for horse and cow feed. Hay is $20 a ton; cats 37 cents a bushel; corn 64 cents a bushel, and other things in proportion. The query is, are we making better use of them, than to have sold them at a price equivalent to 30 cents a bushel over the expense of marketing? clear and open type; is illustrated with appro-What say those who have had considerable experience and observation in feeding carrots to stock. We dont care for the theoretical views of those who do not speak from experience-we have a pretty clear idea of their chemical composition, of their "geletinizing" the contents of the stomach and all that.

Few city people will yet buy them for cooking, or for food for their horses, and the market is likely to be overstocked for a while -But if they are actually worth one-third as HIS CREW much per bushel as corn, we can afford to raise them largely. We think that, on the average, four bushels of carrots are produced as cheaply as one of corn.

Farmers should not leave their implements to rust and rot in their barn yards or open, damp sheds, and then grumble because they do not last longer. Nothing is more discouraging to a farmer, than to commence spring work with a set of rusty rotten implements. Farmers should remember that carefulness in all things is economy, and that a Wares packed carefully and little extra trouble taken in preserving his implements, saves extra expense. - Clod-hopper, Glendale, O.

An aperient and stomachic preparation of IRON purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combustion in Hydrogen. Sanctified by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no preparation of Iron can be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pale and otherwise sickly complexions inlicate its necessity in almost every conceivable Innoxious in all malladies in which it has been tried, it has proved absolutely curative in each of the following complaints, viz: In Debility, Nervous Affections, Emaciation, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Incipient Consumption, Scrofulous Tuberculosis, Salt Rheum, Mismenstruation, Whites, Chlorosis, Liver Complaints, Chronic Headaches, Rheumatism, Intermittent Fevers, Pimples on the Face,

In cases of General Debility, whether the result of acute disease, or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from Chronic complaints one trial of this restorative has proved successful to an extent which no description nor written attestation would render credible. Invalids so long bed-ridden as to have become forgotton in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly re-appeared in the busy world as f just returned from a protracted travel in a distant land. Some very signal instances of this kind are attested of female Sufferers, emaciated victims of apparent marasmus, sanguineous exbaustion, critical changes, and that complication of nervous and dyspeptic aversion to air and exercise for which the physician has no name.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to Medical men, the operation of this preparation of Iron must necessarily be salutary, for, unlike the old oxides, it is vigorously tonic, without being exciting and overheating, and gently, regularly aperient, even in the most obstinate cases of costiveness without ever being a gastric purgative or inflicting a dis-

It is this latter property, among others which makes it so remarkably effectual and permanent remedy for Piles, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local tendency which forms them.

In Dyspepsia innumerable as are its causes, a single box of these Chalybeate Pills has often sufficed for the most habitual cases, including he attendant costiveness. In unchecked Diarrhoes, even when advanced to Dysentary, confirmed emaciating and apparently malignent, the effects have been equally decisive and astonishing. In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debiliating cough, and remittent heetic, which generally indicates Incipient Consumption, this emedy has allayed the alarm of friends and physicians, in several very gratifying and interesting instances.

In Scrofulous Tuberculsis, this medicated iron has had far more than the good effect of the most cautiously balanced preparations of idione, without any of their well known liabilities. The attention of females cannot be too confidently invited to this remedy and restorative, in the caces peculiarly affecting them.

In Rheumatism, both Chronic and inflamatory -in the latter, however, more decidedly-it has been invariably well reported, both as alleviating pain and reducing the swellings and stifness of the joints and muscles.
