

AGRICULTURAL.
A Swine Pasture.

The practice of good farmers differs in regard to the pasturing of swine according to their varying circumstances. In the East, where the country is most densely populated and pasturage is scarce, the prevailing custom is to keep pigs in the pen for the greater part of the year. The best farmers consider the pig too valuable a laborer to pasture, making, to allow him to waste his energies in roaming the fields. Breeding swine, both males and sows are allowed a license in green pastures, but the rest of the herd, from the age of two months until they are slaughtered, are kept in close pens, and fattened as rapidly as possible. Under this system, pigs from ten months to a year old are made to weigh about three hundred pounds each, and to manufacture about ten dollars worth of manure. This system is undoubtedly the best, where all the pasture is needed for cows and sheep, and where large quantities of manure are needed for the food crops.

In the West and South, where land is cheaper, good farmers rely mainly upon pasturage to keep their swine growing through the summer. In the newer settlements they run almost all in the woods, and derive a large part of their living from manure. Manure is little prized, and the only value of the pig is his flesh, when slaughtered. Without committing ourselves at all to this method of making pork, it is conceded, that under certain circumstances, it is desirable to have swine get their own living.

What sort of a pasture shall be prepared for them? A correspondent wants to know if rye is the best article for them. Rye is only reliable for a few months, and if sown at all, should be sown in connection with clover and grass seed, to make a permanent pasture. M. W. Phillips, a large planter of Mississippi, has discarded rye, and now sows a mixture of clover, oats, and barley. There is unquestionable a good foundation for the proverb "living like pigs in clover," and whatever seeders sow, clover should have a prominent place among them. It furnishes a larger amount of leaves than any of the grasses, and is greedily eaten by swine. They are not very particular as to the kind of green food they have, and a farmer may consult his own convenience as to the kind of grain, or better than any one kind.

After the pasture is staked, it would be better not to feed with swine the first year, unless their noses are jeweled to keep them from rooting. It should not be fed closely. A frequent change from one field is desirable both for the benefit of the plants, and of the animals. Pigs to be fattened, should be taken out of the pasture as early as the first of September, and kept in pens. They can then be kept very economically upon corn cut by the roots, for two months, and finished off in November with cold corn or meal.

Where a regular rotation has been pursued the last year of a field of grass may be devoted to the swine pasture. As the field is to be taken up in the Fall, for wheat, rye, or some other grain, it will be of little consequence if the turf be destroyed by the rooting of the swine.

Grapes—A fruit so hardy, so sure, and requiring as little cultivation and expense, surely not a homestead in our land need be without this luxury. Let there be an arbor in every man's yard, and when the season comes, it will seldom fail to be loaded with the most delicious fruit. There is a cheap way to do this, within the reach of every man:—First, select a place in your yard where you want your arbor, and then dig a trench about one and a half feet deep and two feet wide, and fill with good rich dirt.

Second, go around to your neighbors who have choice selections of grapes—none will refuse to give you a few slips—they will be glad to see your enterprise, and will say that it is a move in the right direction. If they are men of some enterprise in the business, it would be well to ask for advice how to proceed. Plant your slips in the ground in a slanting position, one bud out and another just under the surface of the earth. There should be at least two more in the ground—Follow the above directions, reader, in a few years you will have grape vines by the dozen and grapes by the bush.—Agriculturist.

Sheep-killing Dogs.—Many remedies have been resorted to prevent dogs killing sheep, such as bells on some of the flock; chasing a block to the dog's neck; cutting their tails off just back of their ears, etc. The latter, no doubt, will always prove effectual when practiced; but since this remedy does not command general favor we will venture to prescribe another, which we believe will answer every purpose. It is simply fastening a small bell upon the dog's neck. Murderers choose to do their bloody work in silence. The dog, with a bell on his neck; appears to know that the perpetual tinkle, tinkle, which always accompanies him would betray him, and consequently stays at home.—Farmer.

Pumpkins may be grown among corn without much retarding its growth, and on sandy soils I think their presence a benefit rather than a detriment to the corn. Their broad leaves derive much nourishment from the atmosphere, and are a protection to the earth from the scorching and drying effects of the sun, which is of great importance in dry seasons, although there is no crop that resists the influence of drought with so much vigor as corn.

An aperient and stomachic preparation of IRON purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combination in Hydrogen. Sanctified by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no preparation of Iron can be compared with it. Chronic complaints of the head, depression of vital energy, pale and otherwise sickly complexions indicate its necessity in almost every conceivable case.

In various cases of general debility, whether the result of acute disease, or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from chronic complaints, one trial of this restorative has proved successful to an extent which no description nor written attestation would render credible. Invalids so long bed-ridden as to have become forgotten in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly re-appeared in the busy world as if just returned from a protracted travel in a distant land.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to Medical men, the operation of this restorative is peculiarly salutary, for, unlike the old oxides, it is vigorously tonic, without being exciting and over-heating, and gently, regularly aperient, even in the most obstinate cases of constipation without ever being a gastric purgative or inducing a disagreeable sensation.

In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debility, cough, and remittent hectic, which generally indicate latent Consumption, this restorative has allayed the alarm of friends and physicians in several very gratifying and interesting instances.

In Scrophulous Tuberculosis, this medicated Iron has had far more than the good effect of the most cautiously balanced preparations of Iron, without any of their well known liabilities.

The attention of females cannot be too confidently invited to this restorative, and in the cases peculiarly affecting them.

In Rheumatism, both Chronic and inflammatory—the latter, however, more decidedly—it has been invariably well reported, both as alleviating pain and reducing the swellings and stiffness of the joints and muscles.

In intermittent fevers it must necessarily be a great remedy and energetic restorative, and its progress in the new settlements of the West will probably be one of high renown and usefulness.

No remedy has ever been discovered in the whole history of medicine, which exerts such prompt, happy and fully restorative effects. Good appetite, complete digestion, rapid acquisition of strength, with an unusual disposition for active and cheerful exercise, immediately follow its use.

At up to 50 cents per bottle containing 60 pills, price 50 cents per box; for sale by druggists and dealers. Will be sent free to any address on receipt of the price. All letters, orders, etc., should be addressed to:

Above we present you with a likeness of DR. MORSE—the inventor of MORSE'S INDIAN ROOT PILLS. This philanthropist has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited Europe, Asia, and Africa, as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of the Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were first discovered.

Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arise from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD—that our strength, health and life depend upon this vital fluid. When the various passages become clogged, and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action, becomes thick, corrupted, and diseased; thus causing all pains, sickness and distress of every name; our strength is exhausted, our health we are deprived of, and if nature is assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become thick and cease to act, and thus our life will forever be blown out.

How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. How pleasant to us that we have it in our power to take a medicine in your name, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountains of the North American Garden, for the health and recovery of diseased men. One of the roots from which these Pills are made is a Sassafras, which opens the pores of the skin, and assists Nature in throwing out the finer parts of the corruption within.

The second is a plant which is an Expectorant, that opens and cleanses the passage of the lungs, and thus, in a soothing manner, performs its duty in throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic, which gives double ease and strength to the kidneys; thus encouraged, they draw large amounts of impurity from the blood, which is then carried off naturally by the urinary or water passages, and which could not have been discharged in any other way. The fourth is a Cathartic, and accompanies the other ingredients of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood; the coarse particles of impurity which cannot pass by the other outlets, are thus taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.

From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only enter the stomach, but become mixed with the blood, for it does not pass to every part, and completely rids out and cleanses the system from all impurity, and the life of the body, which is the blood, becomes perfectly healthy; consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system, for they cannot remain when the body becomes so pure and clear.

The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will pass to the affected parts, and which will open the natural passage for the disease to be cast out; hence, a large quantity of food and other matter is heaped up, and the stomach and intestines are literally clogged with the corrupted matter; thus a burning or flagrant fire is constantly burning within the blood, which drives the corrupted matter through every vein and artery, until it takes from the body by disease. Dr. Morse's PILLS have added to themselves victory upon victory, by restoring millions of the sick to healthy and happy. Yes, thousands who have been nearly or completely abandoned by doctors, pain and agony, whose limbs have been scorched by the burning elements of raging fever, and who have been brought, as it were, within a step of the silent grave, now stand ready to testify that they would have been abandoned with the dead, had it not been for this great and wonderful medicine, Morse's Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and steadily surprised, in witnessing their alarming symptoms gradually subside, and their strength and vigor return, and they were able to leave their beds, and take away all sickness, pain and agony, for they at once got to work at the fountain of the disease, which is the blood.

Therefore, it will be shown, especially by those who use these Pills, that they will cleanse and purify the blood, that they destroy every particle of its impurity, and thus give you a long and happy life, and the prospect of a long and happy life will cheer and brighten your old age.

Sold by Thomas Debus, Druggist, and by Medicine Dealers generally throughout the County. R. Luke Johnson, successor to A. J. White & Co., No. 50 Lombard St., N. Y. Traps, made by William Morse & Co., (Manufacturers of Dr. A. Brock's Medical Instruments), Ebersburg, Madison County, N. Y., General Agents.
