

Deliveries of Wisdom.

In being angry we punish ourselves. The way to bring the world under us, is to be patient under it. It is ill-dressing ourselves for another world by the glass of this world. Riches have made many good men worse, but never made any bad men better. Duty can never have too much of our diligence, nor too little of our confidence. There is no landing on the shore of felicity without sailing in the bark of fidelity. There was not a drop of water for Dives, who had not a crumb of bread for Lazarus. P. Green asks if it is not rather intemperate to allow invalids to recruit? A man passes for a sage if he seeks for wisdom; if he thinks he has found it, he is a fool. Happiness must arise from our own temper and actions, and not immediately from any external conditions. The flower of love can never flourish upon a soil that is not moistened by the dew of respect and admiration. We should make the same use of a book that a bee does of a flower—she steals sweets from it, but does not injure it. Whenever you drink, be sure you have your nose above water—is Prentice's very excellent advice to the world. 'Thrice is he armed who has his quarrel just.' But six times armed is he who owns a good revolver. True beauty is but virtue made visible in outward grace. Beauty and vice are disjoined by nature herself. Gossip is one of the meanest as well as one of the most degraded crimes that society tolerates. They who walk on the heads of the multitude walk insecurely. Men's heads are a dangerous footing. He who blows the coals in quarrels has nothing to do with, has no right to complain if a spark fly in his face. Nothing can be more unjust, or ridiculous, than to be angry with another because he is not of your opinion. Cheerfulness is always to be supported if a man is out of pain, but birth to a prudent man should always be accidental. It is impossible to lay down any determinate rule for temperance, because what is luxury in one, may be temperance in another. We should educate the whole man—the body, the heart—the heart to act, the head to think, and the heart to feel. Every girl who intends to qualify for marriage should go through a course of cooking. Unfortunately, few wives are able to dress anything but themselves. A modest person seldom fails to gain the good will of those who converse with, because nobody envies a man who does not appear to be pleased with himself. Hon. Geo. M. Keim, a prominent and well known citizen of Reading, and equally as prominent in Pennsylvania, died in that city last week. The election in Maryland last week resulted in the election of six union members of Congress. Davis was defeated in Baltimore by May, a professed union man, but we think a doubtful one. As the Democrat has defended the Quartermaster's Department as well as himself, it can ask the question whether the blankets referred to were purchased at the proper place, are there lots of democrats in office in it? 'Tommy, my son, run into the store and get some sugar.' 'Excuse me, ma, I am somewhat indisposed this morning. Send father and tell him to bring me a plug of tobacco.' A corps of operators and workmen is now being organized, to follow the army of invasion for the purpose of establishing and keeping open constant telegraphic communication with the military authorities at Washington. 'If I should be drafted into service, what should you do?' said a gentleman to his wife lately. 'Get a substitute for you I suppose,' was the reply, where upon the worse half changed the subject of conversation. 'Ask for ten dollars on account,' was the prompt reply. He passed. The pleasantest part of a man's life is generally that which passes in courtship, provided his passion be sincere, and the party beloved kind with discretion. Love, desire, hope all the pleasing emotions of the soul rise in the pursuit. The most beautiful flowers soon fade and droop, and die; this is also the case with man; his days are uncertain as the passing breeze. This hour it glows in the blush of health and vigor; but the next day he may be counted with the number no more known on earth. The steamer Canadian, from Quebec for Liverpool, struck on a shoal of ice and sank in thirty-five minutes. From twenty to thirty lives were lost. The survivors, one hundred and eighty in number, have arrived at St. Johns. There was a 'peace party' in the war of 1812, the members of which were regularly denounced by the democracy as 'British Tories.' There is a peace party springing up now under the patronage of southern sympathizers who are suggesting peace at any price. What will the people do with them? The Lancaster, (Pa.) Express, says that the principle of a firm in New Orleans, La., who recently sent out eight young men from their employ fully equipped at their expense, to fight against the good old Union, is a native of Lancaster county, and owns two fine rags there. Speaking of the First Vermont Regiment, the Rutland Courier of last week says: While they were in camp at Rutland the first ten men in one of the companies took a fancy to see how much ground they could cover. They accordingly formed a continuous oval upon the earth, and measured sixty-seven feet and six inches. The Vicksburg Wagon is the most cheerful under the privations of secessionary life of any paper we have seen: 'We may be had off for whiskey, but Mississippi river water, diluted with a chew of tobacco and a grain of strychnine, is a very good substitute for the Cincinnati article, of which we may be deprived.'

Dissatisfaction of the Soldiers of the Regular Army at Appointments of the Secretary of War.

The result of Gen. Pierce's incapacity at Great Bethel has brought to light a deep feeling which exists among the subordinate officers and privates in the regular army. Several of the best officers declare that they are unwilling to be butchered through the incompetence of civilians holding posts as field officers. The term of enlistment of many of the private soldiers in the regular army will expire in a month, and they declare they will not re-enlist if the officers appointed from civilians are to be continued. The present Secretary of War has demoralized the regular army fearfully by his course of proceeding in appointing officers for mere political ability and overlooking the officers of the regular army. The regulars say they will stand by the country and the flag; but they cannot bear the disgrace of being led on to defeat and disgrace, in order that political hacks may be rewarded. Gen. Scott is believed to sympathize with the officers and men of the regular army, as well as the President, but Gen. Cameron and three members of the Cabinet seem not disposed to accede to the request of the President and Gen. Scott. If something be not done speedily to change the mode of conducting affairs in the War Department, the regular army will lose much of its efficiency. The U. S. army at noon need light artillery, and Major Davis has gone to Washington to secure it. Capt. Davis was sent, on Wednesday, with a flag of truce to the enemy, to inquire about the dead and missing. The flag was respected, and Capt. D. well treated. It was stated that all the wounded left were dead, and that they were buried by the enemy, near the spot where they fell. The Post Office Department is settling the accounts of the offices in the Seceded States. Information has just been received from Mobile to the effect that the Postmaster of that city will return to the Department some two thousand dollars' worth of U. S. postage stamps which are now in his possession. Regan, the Rebel Postmaster-General objects, but the Mobile Postmaster insists upon squaring his accounts. Twenty other Postmasters in the Rebel States have settled honestly with the Department. A citizen of Martinsburg, Virginia, who has arrived here, represents that the inhabitants of that region of the State are living in terror, in consequence of the exactions of the rebel troops. A clergyman who has arrived here from Manassas Junction, expresses the opinion that Beauregard intends to make a demonstration against the Federal lines, in connection with Gen. Johnston, who commands the Harpers Ferry force. It is ascertained that the batteries at Great Bethel were commanded by Col. Magruder, a deserter from the U. S. army, and that he had direction of the gun which killed the late Lieut. Greble. The enemy claim that they had but one regiment behind their entrenchments at the time of the attack, but that they were afterwards re-inforced by cavalry from the camp at Yorktown. The whole country between Hampton and Yorktown is thick with the batteries of the Rebel army in that part of Virginia. NORTHERN SOLDIERS IN WARM CLIMATES.—Dr. Nott says:—'One attack of either intermittent or remittent fever seems to establish a strong pre-disposition to others, and many physicians of the south contend that the newly arrived plethoric foreigners for a year or two resist the malarial cause better than the natives.' (By the term foreigner is meant those not born in the South.) Dr. Nott says, also, that 'bilious fever attacks with more violence the plethoric stranger, and is more often fatal to him; but, on the other hand, this miasmatic poison (like the Harpes, the fabled offspring of Tellus and Oceanus) feeds upon the bloated liver of the native, and drags him prematurely to the grave.' To this the Boston Post adds:—'The United States army in the war with Mexico was composed of persons from all sections of the country, and the terms of service ranged from three to twenty-six months. The volunteer force lost by killed in battle less than ten per thousand of their aggregate number, the ten new recruits lost by the same cause less than thirteen per thousand, and the old army lost less than fifty-one per thousand, of the aggregate force employed. The most important battles were in the hot months of August and September, when it is very likely there are more camp diseases than in other months. Yet it does not appear that the northern and western troops suffered from disease as much as those from the South. The mortality from disease appears, by official returns, to have been least in the Illinois troops, increasing from the least to greatest mortality in the following series:—Indiana, Massachusetts, Arkansas, Michigan, Maryland and District of Columbia, Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Florida, Virginia, South Carolina, and Tennessee; the northern, on the whole, being decidedly subject to a less rate of mortality than the southern troops. It is apparent, therefore, that in the event of a southern campaign, the facts being as we have stated, the southern leaders are much mistaken in calculating upon the yellow and bilious fevers as auxiliaries in the rebellion.'

bouts ordered by the United States will far exceed in construction and machinery those which the British government sent to Crimea. A material for rifled and other four times stronger than cast iron is found in puddled steel. Experiments for ships show that corrugated steel plates for ships show that with half the thickness of the plates employed in England and France ships may be rendered shot-proof. An offer has been made to the government for building within six months a steel plated ship which will carry but one gun, but which will be bomb and shot proof, and capable of breaching any fortification—payment to depend on success. POISONING SOLDIERS.—A letter from Miss Dix to a gentleman in this city states positively that several soldiers have died in the hospital in Washington city, poisoned by strychnine contained in cakes which they purchased from peddlars who came around their camps. This is horrible.—Pittsburgh Post
