

AND THEN.—A story is told of a very good and pious man whom the Church of Rome had enrolled among her saints on account of his great holiness.

He was living at one of the Italian Universities, when a young man whom he had known as a boy, ran up with a face full of delight, and told him that he had long been wishing above all things in the world to be at length fulfilled, his parents having just given him leave to study the Law, thereupon he had come to the law school at his University on account of the great fame, and meant to spare no pains or labor in getting through his studies as quickly as possible.

In this way he ran on a long time; and when at last he came to a stop, the holy man, who had been listening to him with great patience and kindness, said—

"Well, and when you have got through your course of studies, what do you mean to do then?"

"Then I shall take my Doctor's degree," answered the young man.

"And then?" inquired Philippo Neri.

"And then," continued the youth, "I shall have a number of difficult and knotty cases to manage, shall catch people's applause by my eloquence, my zeal, my acuteness, and my reputation."

"And then?" again asked the holy man.

"And then—why then there cannot be a question but what I shall be promoted to some high office or other; besides, I shall make money and grow rich."

"And then?" repeated Philippo.

"And then," said the student, "and then I shall die."

"And then?" asked Philippo.

Whereupon the young man made no answer, but cast down his head and went away. This last "And then?" had pierced like a flash of lightning into his soul, and he could not get rid of it.

Soon after he forsok the study of the Law, gave himself up to the ministry of Christ, and spent the remainder of his days in goodly words and works.

The question which Philippo Neri put to the young lawyer is one which we should put frequently to ourselves. When we have done all that we are doing, all that we dream of doing, even supposing that all our dreams were accomplished, that every wish of our heart is fulfilled, still may we ask "What will we do?—What will be then?" Whenever we cast our thoughts forward, never let them stop on this side of the grave—let them be carried to the grave itself; but when we have followed ourselves thither, and have seen ourselves laid there, still ask ourselves the searching question—AND THEN?

Lately a rich Frenchman from Paris ran off with the fascinating wife of an American gentleman, to switzerland. The unfortunate husband, instead of following up the absconding parties, installed himself immediately in a chateau owned by his rival, and wrote him the following letter, as an explanation of the extraordinary step he had taken:—

"You have appropriated my wife, and I have taken possession of your chateau. I hope you will have an agreeable journey in the land of William Tell, although it is somewhat odd during the winter in the midst of the Aelvetian Glaciers. My wife, I hope is taking lessons de chant. I have had your favorite hot-house oranges removed, because it obstructed my view of the beautiful little lake. I think you will appreciate my position while enjoying your own."

An old Dutchman, who for many years, kept the ferry at Oil Creek, was one day crossing with a large load of passengers, who with one exception, addressed each other, as Col. Major, Capt., Judge, &c. When the fare came to be paid, he charged the titled men one shilling each.

"What is my fare?" said the gentleman who had no title, after the rest had all paid.

"Your fare?" said the Dutchman, "your fare is chust nothing—you ish de first high private Yankee I ever carried over dish creek and you ish welcome!"

A Humorous fellow subpoenaed as a witness on a trial for assault, one of the counsel, who was noted for brow-beating witnesses, asked him what distance he was from the parties when the assault happened.

He answered:

"Just four feet five inches and a half."

"How came you to be so exact, fellow?" said the counsel.

"Because I expected some fool or other would ask me, and I measured it."

The following touching poem is devoted to the healing powers of Russian salve.

The bullfrogs raised their tails on high, and bounded o'er the plain!

A humble bee went thundering by, and then came down the rain!

Chain lightning split a peasants nose, and killed a yearling calf!

Loud o'er the thunder rose, a cry for RUSSIAN SALVE!

"You Zeke."

"What ma?"

"Have you sanded your teeth and tallowed your hair?"

"Yes, ma."

"Tared your boots and corked your eye brows?"

"Yes ma!"

"Then teagle your hat, and go to the meeting; we must be as fashionable as our neighbors."

A great deal of love lost—women kissing each other.

A Christian Mother.

The Rev. Dr. Hawks, recently delivered a lecture before a Historical Society, when he related the following story, illustrative of female heroism—

Among those, he observed, who formed a part of the settlement during the revolutionary struggle, was a poor widow, who, having buried her husband, was left in poverty, with the task upon her hands of raising three sons. Of these, the two eldest, ere long, fell in the cause of their country, and she struggled on with the youngest as best she could.

After the fall of Charleston, and the disastrous defeat of Col. Buford, of Virginia, by Taiton, permission was given to some four or five American females to carry necessaries and provisions, and administer some relief to the prisoners on board the prison ship and in the jails at Charleston. This widow was one of the volunteers upon this errand of mercy.

She was admitted within the city, and, braving the horrors of pestilence, employed herself to the extent of her humble means in alleviating the sufferings of her countrymen. She knew what she had to encounter; but, notwithstanding, went bravely on.

Her mission of humanity having been fulfilled, she left Charleston on her return—but alas! her exposure to the pestilential atmosphere she had been obliged to breathe, had planted in her system the seeds of fatal disease; and ere she reached her home, she sank under an attack of prison fever, a brave martyr to the cause of humanity and patriotism.

The dying mother, who now rests in an unknown grave, thus left her only son the sole survivor of his family, to the world's charity; but little did she dream, as death closed her eyes, the future of that orphan boy. The son became President of this free Republic—for that widow was the mother of Andrew Jackson.

GOD BLESS YOU, MY LITTLE FELLOW.—A crippled beggar, in a large city, was striving to pick up some old clothes that had been thrown him from a window, when a crowd of rude boys gathered about him, mimicking his awkward movements, and hooting at his helplessness and rags. Presently a noble little fellow came up, and pushing through the crowd, helped the poor crippled man to pick up the gifts, and placed them in a bundle.—Then slipping a piece of silver into his hand, he was running away, when a voice far above him said:

"Little boy with a straw hat, look up."

He did so, and a lady, leaning from an upper window, said earnestly:

"God bless you, my little fellow—God bless you for that."

The lady was the wife of a man so distinguished among the great men of this country, that every one of these boys would have been proud to obtain her approbation; and when she wrote down his name, as one she wished to remember, he felt more than paid for all that he had done. As he walked along, he thought how glad he had made his own heart by doing good. He thought of the poor beggar's grateful look; then of the lady's smile, and the words of approval; and last, and better than all, he could hear his Heavenly Father whispering, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

Little reader, when you have an opportunity to do good, and feel tempted to neglect it, remember "the little boy with the straw hat."

—FIFTY CENTS A GAME.—Last summer at a State Fair, a genuine Yankee was strolling about the grounds, when he was accosted by a gambler, and asked to play a game of cards.

"Well," he replied, "I don't know much about cards, I don't."

"Well," said the gambler, "I'd like to play a game with you. What will you play with me for?"

"Well," said our friend, "I will play a game with you for fifty cents."

Down they sat; the gambler put down fifty cents, and asked our friend if he begged?

"No," said he, "I have got a very good hand—I don't beg."

"Well," replied the other, "put your money down."

"What money?" asked Johnathan.

"I didn't say I'd put down fifty cents. You asked me what I'd play for, and I said fifty cents—and I'll play all night with you for fifty cents a game."

The first graduate in the first examining class at West Point, last week, was a poor Irish boy, named Peter O'Rourke, who at the age of sixteen years, did not know his letters. The lad saved the lives of several persons on Lake Erie, who, out of gratitude offered him a considerable sum of money, which he declined on condition that they would secure him an education. They complied with his request, sent him to school, and afterwards secured him a situation at West Point, where he has just graduated with the highest honors. It is out of such stuff that the great men of this country are made.

The casting of brass cannon has become an established business in Memphis. Messrs. Quincy & Robinson have received orders for thirty guns, which they are now casting at the rate of one a day. They will probably have seventy more to cast. The brass they use is entirely of Tennessee copper.

MANHOOD, How Lost How Restored.

ON THE NATURE, TREATMENT AND RADICAL CURE OF SPERMATORRHOEA Seminal Weakness, Sexual Debility, Nervousness and Involuntary Emissions inducing Impotency, and Mental and Physical Incapacity.

BY ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the "Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience, that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.
