

The following excellent poem, entitled "The Brier-Wood Pipe," is from the pen of Mr. Charles Dawson Shanly...

Ah! hully for me, again, when my turn for picket is over, And now for a smoke, as I lie, with the moonlight, out in the clover...

Will be bronzed from the delicate lines of his face. Where of late only childhood's soft beauty I saw...

There are homes that are humbler and sadder than ours, There are those who must suffer for fire and bread...

Where my darling in its beauty I saw He was only a child 'till he went to the war.
