Congress.

There is not, and has not been for weeks, any Congressional news worth recording...

In the mean time there is no limit to the extravagance of the Agents of the Government...

Mr Fessenden's speech last week started quite a fever in the War Department...

AMANDA—Asks in answer to the following question—'When is a man not a man?'

JESSIE—The following lines are Shakespeare's. They occur in the 'Tragedy of Julius Caesar.'

AMANDA—Wants to know if small beer is an intoxicating beverage.

BLANCH—We advise you to remember the advice of the poet Cowper to young misses—

MAGGIE, in a note says—'I heard your brother Barker the other day, use the following language: 'I'll be darned if I keep the first red cent about literary crickets.'

It is it true that brother Barker got gloriously tight after reading the Democrat & Sentinel of two weeks ago?

The weather during the last few days, has been intensely cold, and the sleighing superb.

Certain individuals in this place, are always very indignant when we chance to pitch into old Barker, but are delighted whenever the old Mountbank, through his deputies pitches into us.

Lieut. James Murray, of the Silver Greys, is in town on a visit to his family.

Read Prof. Wood's advertisements.

To Correspondents.

On glancing into our private drawer, we find it full to overflowing, with letters from correspondents which remain unanswered...

Our attention during the last year has been so exclusively devoted to politics, that we have had but little time to devote to more genial or inviting subjects...

LORENA.—The popular song, "Annie Laurie," concerning the history of which you inquire, was written about the year 1690, by a Scotchman named Douglas...

The song, as written by Mr. Douglas, contains but two verses, and differs slightly in other respects, from the ballad which obtained a world wide reputation during the Crimean war...

Maxwellton's banks are bonnie, Where early fits the dew; Where me and Annie Laurie Made up the promise true;

Her brow 'tis like the snow drift, Her breast 'tis like the swan's; She's jimp about the middle; Her waist ye weel might span;

DOLLIE—Wants to know if we wouldn't like an assistant in the discharge of our editorial duties.

AMANDA—Asks in answer to the following question—'When is a man not a man?'

JESSIE—The following lines are Shakespeare's. They occur in the 'Tragedy of Julius Caesar.'

Mason and Slidell.

We last week published an abstract of Mr. Seward's letter to Lord Lyon, with regard to the arrest of the two famous rebels, Mason and Slidell, on board a British vessel...

We are sorry.

We are sorry to learn that brother Barker stands no earthly chance of being nominated for Congress. It would be a glorious thing for the Democracy to get the old Mountbank in the field.

A Republican in this place remarked to us the other evening, that the man who contends that Negroes should enjoy the rights under our Constitution, that are enjoyed by white men, is meaner than even the meanest Buck Nigger.

J. Patton Thompson, Esq. of Phila. although a Republican admitted to us recently that Barker earnestly contended with him in this town on a certain occasion that a negro is as good as a white man.
