

AGRICULTURAL.

CULTIVATION OF THE WHITE BEAN.

The late Judge Puell says:—Beans may be cultivated in drills or in hills. They are a valuable crop, and with good care are as profitable as a wheat crop. They leave the soil in good condition. I cultivated beans the last year in three different ways, viz.: in hills, in drills, and sowed broadcast. I need not describe the flat, which is a well known process. I had an acre in drills, which was the best crop I ever saw. My management was this: On the acre of light ground, where the clover had been frozen out the preceding winter, I spread eight loads of long manure, and immediately plowed and harrowed the ground. Drills or furrows were then made with a light plough, at the distance of two and a half feet, and the beans thrown about the 25th of May, by the hand at the rate of at least a bushel on the acre. I then gauged a double mold-board plow, which was passed once between the rows, and was followed by a light, one-horse roller, which fastened the ridges. The crop was twice weeded by the hoe, but not earthed. The produce was more than forty eight bushels by actual measurement.

TIME FOR TRANSPLANTING.

Next to the fall, when the soil is warmer than the air, and new roots immediately form, mid winter is the best for transplanting all hardy deciduous trees. At any time during the winter, that the ground can be opened freely, the planter should be on hand setting out his apples, pears, cherries, etc., in the orchard; or the maples, lindens, winged elms, etc., in the ornamental part of the grounds. Trees planted at this time, almost invariably succeed well, and the spring labors are just so much advanced as the weather and your energies facilitate progress Ohio Farmer.

SOIL FOR THE FLOWER GARDEN.

The best soil for the garden is a mellow loam, but almost any fair soil can be made suitable by draining, deep digging, and enriching with good stable manure, leaves, sandy loam etc. If the soil is heavy sand and ashes may be applied with advantage. The compost or manure, if well mixed with the soil, will mellow it, and work a decided change in its texture in a few years. The thorough preparation of the soil is a very important matter; in fact, the foundation of all culture, and must not be slighted. We would recommend that the ground should be dug and mellowed, thoroughly eighteen inches deep. This may be considered troublesome, but remember that in the garden everything must be grown to the highest perfection to afford pleasure. If we could obtain flowers such as are described in the journals that treat of gardening, and are figured in colored plates, we must give them the very best care. This is the reason why some are disappointed. They read descriptions of choice things, and purchase seeds at a high price, but at the time of sowing they are not what they are anticipated. The description which induced them to buy was of flowers well grown; they have given their no more care than they would a cabbage or a hill of corn; hence the difference.

COVERING GRAPE VINES IN WINTER.

The easiest way of covering is to lay the vines upon the ground after the leaves have been dropped in the fall, (when the peeling should be done,) and cover them slightly with earth, or what is better, the pruned twigs and leaves mixed with the earth. The only objection to the use of straw is, that it sometimes furnishes a harbor for mice to circle the vines. These protected by having been tied in a bundle with straw, above ground, do equally well, but with well trained vines it is more trouble.

A NOVEL ICE HOUSE

The Westend (Conn.) Herald gives this account of the manner in which Mr Goodwin of New Hartford, fills his ice house:—Mr Goodwin is supplied with excellent water from a spring at a considerable elevation above his house. Connected with a pipe which supplies the latter is a branch pipe leading to the ice house, across which it is extended. Within the ice house this pipe is pierced by twenty or thirty small holes, from which as many fine jets of water rise to the roof, falling back in drops over the whole bottom surface of the house. These jets are only let on when the weather is cold, and the doors and ventilators being open, the water freezes as it falls, and in a few days, or weeks at the farthest, the house is filled with a single block of perfectly pure, transparent ice. Mr Goodwin's ice keeps during the entire season, with much less waste than that packed in the ordinary way. It costs him nearly nothing.

—Mr Kirtz estimated that in a hive containing combs with 50,000 cells, 20,000 are appropriated for storing honey and pollen, and 20,000 for brood.
