The War.

The news from the war is not very satisfactory yet. Gen. Grant has abandoned his plan of attacking Richmond from the north, he has moved his army, and will attack it now from the east. He is going over the same ground that McClellan went over in 1862. McClellan had lost very few men when he was where Grant is now, but Grant had many severe engagements ere he reached this point, and lost a great many men. The great battle of the campaign is not yet fought. We may look for prodigious slaughter. Our army are getting, and have already gotten a great deal of reinforcements, but we believe the Southern forces are very large too. A few weeks must tell the tale, whether Richmond will be taken this campaign or not.

If Richmond is not taken, then is the war a very useless affair. And if it be taken, and Lee's army not captured or destroyed, the war may be a very tedious one. Driving the army back through that city does not break the back bone of the rebellion, indeed it scarcely breaks an arm of it. Let us look out for a ten years war, if we can not hurl the present Administration from power, by the force of the ballot box, this fall.

Our County Ticket.

We this week flung our ticket to the breeze, believing, if we can judge from the harmony and unanimity that prevailed in that Convention that it will give pretty general satisfaction. The Convention was composed of as fine a set of men as ever assembled in a deliberative body, in Cambria county. And we believe that they would compare very favorably with the same number of men in the legislature of Pennsylvania, or any other State of this once glorious confederacy. The good feeling that was exhibited among the members of that nominating body, is a sure guarantee that they were in earnest and that everything is right. Had the Convention decided for other candidates we would be perfectly satisfied, as there were few if any aspirants for either of the offices, that were either incompetent or undeserving. We will hereafter allude to these candidates in detail. They are all well and favorably known in Cambria county, and will doubtless receive the support of the entire Democracy of our county.

Rents are enormous, as the poor fellow said when he looked at his coat.

The Hatred Between the North and the South.

There are probably no countries in the civilized world, that have such a cordial hatred for each other as the North has to the South and the South to the North at the present time. This hatred was concocted in England many years ago, and in 1828, an agent was sent over to New England in the person of a certain George Thompson, to carry out the English scheme, which is now about to be matured. At that time he made some headway in indoctrinating the puritans of New England with a hatred to the slaveholders of the South.

That same hiring of the British Government is now making harangues about the side shows at Washington, and flattering the President about the progress he has made in the abolition of slavery. Lincoln is not only pleased, but delighted with him. England never for a moment lost sight of the disruption of this Republic. They kept goading on that puritan nation of pedlers in and around Boston, until they got them up to a boiling heat about slavery, and finally into a war of extermination against slaveholders. That same George Thompson, tells the President at one of these side shows, "that within the last two or three years, your nation has been born again in the cause of freedom. That noble martyr of liberty, 'John Brown' the hero of Harper's Ferry, by his devotion and death sent a thrill of new life to the nation's heart of hearts. Had it not been for John Brown's immolation on the altar of liberty and patriotism, honest Abraham Lincoln could not have been elected President of the United States, and thus become the second deliverer of the nation. And had he not been elected, the cause of the negro emancipation would have gone backward probably for half a century. And Abraham swallows this compliment from this hired Englishman with great delight when he tells him it was the old murderer John Brown that elected him President of the United States. The English people know this to be true, and he is over here now finishing the work that was begun thirty years ago. The English understand the affairs of this Government better than Mr. Lincoln does. The Southern people were early apprised of this interference with their slaves by the Northern people, hissed on by the English. Although the Englishmen never went there themselves in the character of Abolitionists, they were incessantly stuffing the Puritans with this doctrine. When the Yankee came among the Southern people in the capacity of school master, tract pedler, or preacher of the gospel of an anti-slavery God, they were sometimes treated pretty roughly. They sometimes bedecked them with garments composed of tar and feathers, and sometimes escorted them out of the neighborhood mounted on a rail. Every case of this kind made the feeling more bitter and intense in the North. They would steal their slaves whenever they got an opportunity, and would sometimes murder the master, if he would follow them up. They got their preachers to take hold of the matter, and thunder against slaveholders from the pulpit. Orators made it the text of their theme, and writers wrote books and tracts innumerable. A man the name of Helper wrote a book and had it endorsed by nearly all the Republican members of Congress, inculcating the doctrine that the slaves should all arise and cut their masters throats. Underground railroads as they were called, were instituted for the purpose of stealing and secreting the runaway slaves, and sending them into Canada, pretty much the same route in Pennsylvania, that the horse thieves had, when some years ago they were in successful operation. In this state of public excitement and hatred, John Brown an old crazy fanatic having got a taste for blood in the Kansas difficulties, made a raid into Virginia and took Harper's Ferry. He was hung as a traitor and murderer, but he was canonized as a Saint by the Puritans of New England.

This was the state of the public mind at the time the war broke out, and if the feeling was bad at that time, it is incalculably worse now. We were stuffed up with the idea, that the Southern people would not fight, that they would be starved out in a few months. The President called out seventy-five thousand men to finish the rebellion, that would not do. He then called out sixty-four thousand, then again five hundred thousand, then three hundred thousand, then again three hundred thousand, then again three hundred thousand, then five hundred thousand, then two hundred thousand, then one hundred thousand, making in all two million and upwards of three hundred thousand in the army alone, without the navy, and the war is still progressing.

Now this Administration had its own way for more than three years, and the history of the world affords no example of such a waste of men and money. But it is said we have got the right kind of a man at the head of the army of the Potomac now. He is making fine headway, if only the Copperheads would keep quiet and believe every thing that is told them, and not be giving aid and comfort to the enemy by telling the truth, then Grant would take Richmond and the Southern men would lay down their arms and free all their slaves, and the higher grade of officers would come into Washington to get hung, the balance would swear to support Lincoln's proclamations, and ask protection from the new Government that the Puritans are going to construct. We are sick and tired of people saying we are fighting for the Union. Who are fighting for the Union? Certainly the South are not fighting for the Union, and just as certainly is the North not fighting for the Union. The Administration is fighting for conquest and the abolition of slavery. The South is fighting for an independent government, where they believe their property, their lives, their wives and children and household Gods are at stake, and these two parties are not very congenial elements to make a Union out of. The English have succeeded in their policies. For the hatred of both parties will exist until they are annihilated or sink into barbarism.

James C. Noon.

The remains of Adjutant James C. Noon who was killed at the battle of Fredricksburg, on 13th, Dec. 1862, was brought to his mother's, on last Friday. He had been carefully buried in a graveyard at Fredricksburg until an opportunity could be had, to remove his ashes to his native home. After his remains were kept at home until Saturday at 10 o'clock, he was then followed to the grave by a large concourse of relatives and friends. For every one that knew him was his friend, he was kind and gentle in his disposition, noble and manly in his demeanor, and brave as a lion in battle. Peace to his ashes, his bones will now repose along side of an honored father, undisturbed till the sound of the last trumpet. Requiescat in pace eterna.

GODEY'S LADY BOOK.—This elegant periodical is on hand and seems to surpass its predecessors. The fashion plates of the June number, are superb. The enterprising publisher deserves the gratitude of the American ladies.

JUVENILE CONCERT.—The singing school under the direction of Mr. Potterfield, of Allegheny City, will give a concert in this place on next Monday and Tuesday evenings, June 6th and 7th at Myers' Hall. The most attractive feature of the concert, will be the crowning of the May Queen. Master Wille Heorie, of Johnstown, will assist on the occasion. The exercises will be accompanied with the melodeon. Admission to all 15 cents. For particulars see small bills. Buy a ticket and go early if you wish a seat.

Our paper may be a little late coming out next week, if we can get it out at all. This is in consequence of the breaking down of the paper mill, where we got our paper. We are compelled to send to Philadelphia for it, and will make it all right with our readers. We have another drawback, one of our operatives is subject to a malady, that unfortunately lingers in his constitution, and is apt to break out on him at any financial crisis, either ebb or flood.

Simon Cameron is talked of as a candidate for Vice President on the ticket with old Abe. The Day Book thinks there is no earthly doubt that Simon Cameron has nice enough to grace that position. Such a ticket would be a fine combination of snub and rascality—an excellent representation of the character of the great shoddy party.

At a recent sale of autographs in London four letters of Washington—one written in 1788, in favor of a Union of the States—brought $90,55.

THE BLACK BEE AND TRI-COLOR.

There is now forming in a great many of our cities, a society with the above title. The object is an agreement among the ladies, that they will not wear any imported goods. By a statistical report from Boston, we see that 33,500,000 worth of silks, laces and embroideries, are imported yearly, this, with the duties has to be all paid in gold, by wearing goods of our own manufacturing this gold can be all kept at home. This is a very good move and we hope may be carried out by every town, and the ladies wear American made goods such as may be found at E. J. Mills & Co's cheap variety store, where is kept a large variety of all kinds of dry goods.

Call and see them without delay. The highest prices paid for country produce.

THE GREAT CENTRAL FAIR.—The arrangements for the Great Central Fair, to be held at Philadelphia in June, are rapidly approaching completion. We expect there will be a large attendance of our citizens on that occasion, but preparatory to visiting the fair, we would remind all our friends not to fail to be attractive on that occasion, by purchasing at once, at Mr. James M. Thompson's Cheap Cash Store, a new suit of clothes, or some of the innumerable fancy articles he has for sale. The ladies especially, can there obtain anything the heart can wish, consisting of all the latest styles of dress patterns, lace, and goredene, veils &c., &c. We hope our citizens will profit by our advice and take time by the forelock, so as to appear on that occasion among the elite to Philadelphia.
